The Drapers of London were a guild of merchants who dealt in textiles. They were one of the most powerful guilds in London, and played a major role in the city's economy. John Hende was a member of the Drapers' Guild, and played an important role in the early days of the society.

The Drapers' Guild was founded in the 12th century, and by the 13th century it was one of the most powerful guilds in London. The guild had a monopoly on the trade in textiles, and its members were responsible for importing cloth from abroad and selling it to retailers. The Drapers' Guild also had a strong political influence, and its members were often elected to positions of power in the city government.

John Hende was a member of the Drapers' Guild, and he played an important role in the early days of the society. Hende was a successful merchant, and he amassed a large fortune. He was also a generous benefactor, and he donated money to the guild to help build its headquarters. Hende was also a member of the city council, and he used his position to help the guild protect its interests.

The Drapers' Guild was an important part of the economy and society of London. The guild's members were responsible for importing cloth from abroad and selling it to retailers. The guild also had a strong political influence, and its members were often elected to positions of power in the city government. John Hende was an important member of the Drapers' Guild, and he played a major role in the early days of the society.

The Drapers' Guild was a powerful organization that played a major role in the economy and society of London. John Hende was an important member of the guild, and he played a major role in the early days of the society.

Here are some additional information about the Drapers' Guild and John Hende:

* The Drapers' Guild was one of the twelve Great Guilds of London.
* The guild's headquarters was Drapers' Hall, which was located in the City of London.
* John Hende was a member of the Drapers' Guild from 1389 to 1399.
* Hende was a successful merchant, and he amassed a large fortune.
* Hende was also a generous benefactor, and he donated money to the guild to help build its headquarters.
* Hende was also a member of the city council, and he used his position to help the guild protect its interests.