INTRODUCTION.

IT is a laudable part of human nature to desire to know as much as is possible of its Ancestry, in order to contemplate the various forms of religion and government, and their civilizing influences. It is paradoxical that any religion should ever have been vindictive; robbing, torturing and murdering (for the glory of God and the salvation of souls) all who would not conform to their bigoted and tyrannical ideas of religious duty.

But amidst all these persecutions there have been a few noble and fearless people who adopted the motto that "resistance to tyrants was obedience to God," thereby planting the good seed which has grown by slow and sure growth, developing the truest and best theocracy and democracy.

It is always interesting and profitable to read the sayings and doings of good, noble, independent people, who have battled heroically against wrong in all ages and who have been martyrs for truth's sake.

It is a sad and dark picture to contemplate the history of the Puritans, who fled from persecutions only to become worse persecutors in turn; leaving homes and kindred, coming to this then wilderness country to enjoy religious liberty, and by their dishonest practices with the Indians incurring not only their contempt but their hatred and vengeance. It is said the Puritans were continually in danger of the tomahawk of the Indian here, and the perfidy of a corrupt and profligate Court in England. The Indians were not long in discovering the want of good faith and common honesty practised by the Puritans, hence their hostility, which was dreadful in the pious Puritans' eyes. How different was the example of William Penn, who founded a colony and dealt honestly with the Indians, and whose treaty with them, as Voltaire says, "was the only treaty ever made which was not sworn to, and the only treaty which was ever sacredly observed."

In the course of thirty-five years after the landing of the Pilgrims in 1620, there came to these shores a peace-loving people called Friends or Quakers, who were a sober, industrious, thrifty, truth-loving people, who soon came under the terrible scourge of these intolerant Puritans, and were whipped, imprisoned, fined, banished and hung for having the audacity to love and embrace the truth as taught by George Fox.

It is said that the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the Church, so of the noble martyrs who shed their blood in the cause of truth and honest religion, and who have taught bigots in religion that honesty is the only true basis for any religion, and have produced a public sentiment which has broken the chains of the slave and has taught people the simple lesson that in order to have your rights respected you must respect the rights of others.

In noble contrast with Governor John Endicott, of Massachusetts, stands William Penn, who founded a Colony on the principle of equal and exact justice to all, white, red and black; he tolerated and respected all religious opinions, and would not take the large sum of $80,000 due his father, Admiral William Penn, from the English government, because it was earned in War, but took in lieu a deed of Pennsylvania, and then came over and told the Indians that although he had a deed of their lands he did not consider that he owned a foot of it. For seventy years no white person was killed in Pennsylvania by the Indians, and they did not carry weapons of defence.

There is a tradition that the Quaker garb is a passport of safety to the wearer to this day amongst the Indians on our Continent.

Lord Baltimore, a Roman Catholic, founded a colony where all religions could be enjoyed without molestation. Roger Williams, a Baptist, founded a colony where all religious opinions were protected.

That nobility which prefers Right to Power is the truest Aristocracy of the world.

PREAMBLE

Setting forth reasons and causes for separating and dissenting from the Established Church of the old Colony of Massachusetts Bay by the Quakers in 1656.

WHEN from a clear conviction of our inherent rights and duties as conscientious and humble followers of that noble man George Fox, the apostle of peace and good-will on earth; who dared brave the corruptions of a venal, corrupt and tyrannical church and boldly proclaim those eternal principles of truth and right which were clearly in accord with the best teachings of the Bible; we feel that it would be just to set forth the reasons for leaving a church which was the right hand of political power and was a power behind the throne greater than the throne, hence Church and State—church first, which sought to crush and destroy all independence in Church or State.

“We deem our salvation to be an individual work which we cannot do by proxy or for another.

“We deem it proper to eat our bread by the sweat of our brows.

“We deem it proper to wear the yoke of self-denial, and inculcate by our practice as well as by our precepts our friendship for all our fellow-creatures, as we are all God’s children.

“We deem it proper to beat our swords into ploughshares and our spears into pruning-hooks, and to refuse to participate in any and all wars against our fellow-men.

“We deem it proper to declare and proclaim to all the world our abhorrence of all wars, and our independence of all despotic rulers, either spiritual or temporal.

“We deem it our duty to have all our children and all children under our care educated sufficiently to read and write, in order that all persons at mature age may be able to read and interpret the Scriptures for themselves, in order that the light within may direct aright. “Ask and it shall be given you: seek and ye shall find: knock and it shall be opened unto you.”—Matt. VII, 7.

“While we recognize our Duty towards our God, we utterly refuse to bow the head to any earthly potentate, for we cannot serve two masters.

“We deem it proper to declare and protest against the cruel and vindictive persecutions of our (so-called) Christian Church, and we proclaim our independence of the same, and we recognize the true brotherhood of man.

“The seeds thus sown brought forth a class of sturdy independent thinkers who were the men who boldly declared for the Independence of our Country in 1776.”

HISTORICAL EXTRACTS.

From SOUTH COAST SAUNTERINGS IN ENGLAND.

THERE was printed in the county of Hampshire a curious "Annual Repository," two volumes of which I have been enabled, through the kindness of a friend, to examine. These are records of the agricultural, social and religious condition of the various parishes in the county and many entertaining accounts of their antiquities. Of the latter, I was struck with the form of a conveyance by Henry I. (A. D. 1133) of land to Southwick Priory: "I will and firmly decree that the said canons, their officers and servants, shall have and hold all their possessions . . . free and unmolested from shires and hundreds and all manner of suits, pleas and complaints and payments for murders and larcenies, from homsuchen and forest law, from scutage and hidage, gelds, denegelds and homgelds, assorts, assizes, dodande, saides, sum-mages, avepenny and hundred-penny, miskinnings and blodewyte."—*M. SEWEL'S HISTORY OF THE QUAKERS.

IN 1657, William Shattuck, a shoe maker of Boston, being on the first day of the week found at his house instead of coming to the place of worship was taken to the house of correction, where at his first entrance he was cruelly whipped and then kept at work whilst his wife and innocent children were in want on account of his absence. Richard Bellingham, Deputy Governor, said to William's wife that since he was poor and could not pay five shillings per week for not coming to church they should keep him in prison.

John Copeland and Christopher Holder coming to Dedham were taken by the Constable to Boston, when being brought before the Governor, John Endicott, he said in a rage "ye shall be sure to have your ears cut off." Soon after, John Rouse came to Boston and was arrested and put into prison. Then Governor Endicott called the three prisoners by name and said in a great passion, it is the sentence of the Court that you three have each of you his right ear cut off by the hangman. The sentence was executed in private.

In 1658, Sarah Gibbons and Dorothy Waugh came to Boston, and having spoken in the public meeting-place, were brought to the house of correction, and three days before and three days after being whipped were not allowed to have victuals, although they offered to pay for them; and when Sarah afterwards asked Governor Endicott whether this was justice and equity, he answered that it mattered not.

Not long after, Hored Gardner, an inhabitant of Rhode Island, came with her sucking babe and a girl to carry it to Weymouth. Being a Quaker she was hurried to Boston, where both she and the girl were whipped with a three-fold knotted whip. Hored after being whipped knelt down and prayed the Lord to forgive their persecutors.

Daniel and Provided Southwick, son and daughter of Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick, seeing how unreasonably their honest parents and brother Josiah were dealt with, felt themselves encouraged to follow their steps and not frequent the assemblies of such a persecuting generation; for which absence they were fined ten pounds, though it was well known they had no estate. To get this money an order was issued in the General Court at Boston that they should be sold as slaves to any of the English nation at Virginia or Barbadoes to answer said fines.

REV. JOHN SELBY WATSON'S LIFE OF GEORGE FOX.

IN 1656 two women, Mary Fisher and Ann Austin, came to Boston to preach as humble followers of George Fox. There had been no law made against Quakers in New England, yet Richard Billingham, the Deputy Governor, committed these two women to prison on their landing, as being of the sect called Quakers, because one of them in speaking to him said "thou" instead of "you." They were afterwards barbarously treated; they were undressed and searched on pretence of ascertaining whether they were "Witches."

They were kept in confinement five weeks and almost starved; and at last the captain of a vessel was forced to carry them back to England, and the jailor kept their beds, which had been brought on shore, for jail fees: such was the "entertainment" the Quakers first met with at Boston from a people who pretended that for conscience sake they chose the wilds of America rather than the well-cultivated 'Old England.

Four male and four female "Quakers" who landed about a month afterwards were treated in a similar manner by Governor Endicott, and after eleven weeks stay were shipped back to England.

Cassandra Southwick was arrested July, 1656, for absence from worship.

A law was then made prohibiting all masters of ships from bringing "Quakers" to New England and "Quakers" themselves from landing there under penalty of imprisonment.

Quakers, however, still continued to appear in New England, and most cruel measures were adopted for their exclusion. At length two "Quakers," William Robinson, a London trader, and Marmaduke Stevenson, an agriculturist from Yorkshire, both of whom persisted in frequenting Boston and the neighborhood, were ordered by the court to keep themselves out of its jurisdiction "under pain of death," and as they did not feel "free in mind" to obey the order, were in the latter part of the year 1659 actually hanged, and their dead bodies were stripped and mangled by the hands of the mob. A woman named Mary Dyer was executed soon afterwards.

And in the early part of the following year William Leddra and Wenlock Christison were also hung for same reasons.

But these proceedings, which far surpassed anything that had been done against the "Quakers" in England, excited the attention of the English people as well as the "Quakers" themselves, and an application being made to the King, Charles II, a mandamus was addressed by the English government to the authorities of New England, directing that if there were any "Quakers" in that country under sentence of imprisonment, corporeal punishment or death, the proceedings against them should be stopped and they should be sent over to England to be dealt with according to English laws.

This order was so far obeyed that the "Quakers" who were then in prison were set at liberty, and three deputies, Colonel Temple, a priest named Norton, and Simon Broadstreet, one of the magistrates, were sent over to England to inform the King of their release and to deprecate his displeasure.

During their stay in England George Fox and some of his friends found an opportunity of speaking to them and charged them boldly, at least Norton and Broadstreet (who acknowledged that they were concerned in the persecutions), with murder, in having, though subjects of England, put to death peaceable citizens, not by English laws, but by arbitrary enactments of their own; and many of the old Royalists says "Seewel" were earnest with the "Quakers" to bring the New England persecutors or as many of them as possible to trial, but George Fox replied that he would leave them to Him to whom vengeance belonged, and consequently nothing was done in the matter.

It does not appear that any more "Quakers" were put to death in New England, but persecutions were not discontinued and ill-treatment of them by whipping, imprisonment, and other modes of vexation were indulged to a great extent.

BISHOP'S NEW ENGLAND JUDGED.

IN 1657, Lawrence Southwick and Cassandra his wife, an aged and grave couple, inhabitants of Salem, Mass., and members of First church, who for entertaining two strangers, viz.: John Copeland and Christopher Holder, were committed to prison at Boston. Lawrence was released as being a member of First church, to be dealt with by said congregation; but Cassandra was kept in prison seven weeks and then fined forty shillings for owning a paper written by the two aforesaid strangers in reference to the truth and the Scriptures. Gov. Endicott putting questions to her to ensnare her and bring her under the law, which was illegal, said law being enacted to punish any person who should write or hold any heretical papers, said papers were not proved to be heretical but were the truth.

In the 5th Month, 16, 1658, Old Style, Lawrence, Cassandra and their son Josiah were imprisoned at Boston for being Quakers, and were kept there twenty weeks on a charge of violating a law enacted while they were in prison.

JAMES SAVAGE'S GENEALOGICAL DICTIONARY OF FIRST SETTLERS OF NEW ENGLAND.

1658 and 1659. In the dark days of delusion against the Quakers the whole family of Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick suffer much from fines and imprisonment. When the fines of Daniel and Provided were unpaid, the tender hearted General Court with intent to magnify the GLORY OF GOD ordered them to be sold for Slaves to any Christian in Virginia or Barbadoes.

Lawrence made his will at Shelter Island in 1659 and died there three days before his wife, in spring of 1660; his will was proved at Salem in 1660, in which he mentions sons John, Josiah and Daniel, and daughters Provided and Mary (who married Henry Trask), and some grand children.

FELT'S ANNALS OF SALEM.

IN July, 1656, Cassandra, the wife of Lawrence Southwick, is arraigned for absence from worship.

March 23, 1657. Josiah Hobart is preaching at Cape Ann Side.

Sept. 21, 1657. Christopher Holder and John Copeland, Quakers, attempt to address our people after the Minister closed. They are secured until Monday, then sent to Boston where they received thirty stripes and were imprisoned nine weeks. Samuel Shattuck, for interfering when Holder was apprehended, was imprisoned at Boston till he gave bonds. Lawrence Southwick and his wife, for entertaining Holder and Copeland, were confined in the same town.

In March, 1658, John Small, Josiah Southwick and John Burton are apprehended in Dedham for being Quakers, while on their way to Rhode Island to provide a residence for themselves and families, and to escape from their persecutors. They were released and resumed their journey.

June 29, 1658. Among the persons punished for attending a Quaker Meeting at Nicholas Phelps' are John, Daniel and Provided Southwick, Joseph Pope, Anthony Needham, Edward Wharton, Samuel Gaskin, or Gaskill, Henry Trask and wife, Joseph Buffum's wife and his son Joseph, and Thomas Brackett; the wives of Needham, Phelps, Pope, and Geo. Gardner are indicted; Edward Harnett and his wife Priscilla are fined.

March 11, 1659. As the fines of Daniel and Provided Southwick are not paid they are ordered to be sold into Slavery to any of the English living in Virginia or Barbadoes; but this was not done. Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick and their son Josiah, Samuel Shattuck, Nicholas Phelps and Joshua Buffum are banished on pain of death.

Oct. 18, 1659. Hannah Phelps is admonished, and Wm. King is sentenced to be whipped. Margaret Smith and son, and Mary Trask are in prison; they had attended the trial of Robinson, Stevenson and Mary Dyer in Boston.

Nov. 3, 1659. Edward Wharton is whipped and fined for asserting that the two former were unjustly hung.

Nov. 29, 1659. Joseph Miles, Thomas Spooner, James Smith, and Francis Simpson are arraigned with other Quakers.

May 18, 1660. Henry Bacheller and (June 26) the wife of Edmund Nicholson, the wife of Wm. Vincent, Samuel Salmon, and other Friends are prosecuted.

Nov. 27, 1660. The wife of Robert Stone, John Burton and other Quakers are prosecuted.

Dec. 21, 1660. A letter from Mary Trask and Margaret Smith to the Governor, relative to the persecution of their denomination, concludes: "From your house of correction (in Boston) where we have been unjustly restrained from our children and habitations, one of us about 8 months, the other 10 months; and where we are yet continued by you oppressors, yet know no Shame."

March 6, 1661. Of several things for which a fast is observed by the church in Salem is renewal of covenant and adding to it as follows: "Therefore we do covenant by the help of Jesus Christ to take heed and beware of the leaven of the doctrine of the Quakers."*

* How absurdly false this pretence is, for the Quakers did not have any Doctrine or Code of Faith and Belief. They simply by their discipline enjoined the reading of the Bible; and each to interpret for themselves, that the light within each and every person was sufficient to guide them aright, "that he who runs might read, and need not go astray."

March 14, 1661. Edward Wharton attends on Wm. Leddra executed at Boston and assists to bury his body.

Sept. 9, 1661. Josiah Southwick having come from banishment, is ordered by the assistants to be stripped from his girdle upwards, tied to a cart's tail and whipped ten stripes in each of the towns of Boston, Roxbury and Dedham.

Nov. 27, 1661. The General Court vote to comply with a letter from the King (Charles II.) which required them to cease proceedings against the Quakers, and to send such of them as are apprehended over to England for trial. This Royal injunction was brought by Samuel Shattuck from London, whither he had gone after being banished by our authorities.

Dec. 10, 1661. Several of the Friends are fined as usual.

June 6, 1663. Mr Higginson writes to the Legislature; in a postscript is the following: "I doe further entreate y^t ye hon^d. Court will please to consider what course may be taken for ye dissolueing ye Quaker Meetings here which we have frequent and constant without interruption a long time, strange Quakers often repairing hither, y^t occasion may be given for others abroad to looke upon Salem as a nest of Quakers from hence to infect ye rest of ye country."

Philip Veren is sentenced to be severely lashed for saying that our authorities "had murdered the dear saints and servants of God, and that he saw one of them murdered at Boston himself."

To build a prison here £50 are appropriated, which sum was the price of lands taken from Quakers.

Nov. 24, 1663. Twenty-five of this denomination are fined and they continue to be thus treated for several years.

June 26, 1666. John Blevin is among the Quakers prosecuted.

Nov. 24, 1668. Nathaniel Hadlock suffers with the Quakers.

June 29, 1669. Robert Gray, also of the Friends, is fined. The will of Robert Buffum is not allowed, because the witnesses would only testify, and not swear, to its correctness.

July 18, 1676. After a few years' respite, the Quakers are renewedly prosecuted.

Dec. 12, 1695. An order of General Court requires that all the copies of a book entitled "Truth Held Forth," and edited by Thomas Maule, be searched for and seized. This work contained severe reflections on the government for their treatment of the Quakers.

Extract from THE RECORDS OF THE COLONY OF THE MASSACHUSETTS BAY OF NEW ENGLAND.

Oct. 14, 1656. WHEREAS there is a cursed sect of heretics lately risen up in the world, which are commonly called Quakers; who take upon them to be immediately sent of God, and infallibly assisted by the spirit to speak and write blasphemous opinions, despising government and the order of God in church and commonwealth, speaking evil of dignities and reproaching and reviling magistrates and ministers, seeking to turn the people from the faith and gain proselytes to their pernicious ways. This Court taking into serious consideration the premises, and to prevent the like mischief as by their means is wrought in our native land, doth hereby order, and by the authority of this court be it ordered and enacted that what master of any ship, bark, pinnace, catch, or of any other vessel that shall henceforth bring into any harbor, creek or cove within this jurisdiction any known Quaker, or any other blasphemous heretics as aforesaid, shall pay or cause to be paid, a fine of one Hundred Pounds, to the treasurer of the country; except it appear that he wanted true knowledge or information of their being such, and in that case he hath liberty to clear himself by his oath, when sufficient proof to the contrary is wanting; and for default of payment or good security for it, shall be committed to prison and there remain till the said sum be satisfied to the treasurer as aforesaid; and the commander of any such ship or vessel that shall bring them, being legally convicted, shall give in sufficient security to the Governor or any one or more of the magistrates who have power to determine the same, to carry them back to the place from whence he brought them, and on his refusal to do so the Governor or one or more of the magistrates are hereby empowered to issue out his or their warrants to commit such master or commander to prison, there to continue until he shall give sufficient security to the content of the Governor or any of the magistrates as aforesaid, and it is hereby ordered and enacted that what Quakers soever shall arise in this country from foreign parts or come into this jurisdiction from any parts adjacent, shall forthwith be committed to the house of correction, and at their entrance to be severely whipt, and by the master thereof to be kept constantly at work and none suffered to converse or speak with them during the time of their imprisonment, which shall be no longer than necessity requireth; and further it is ordered if any person shall knowingly import into any harbor of this jurisdiction any Quaker books or writings concerning their Devilish opinions, shall pay for every such book or writings, being legally proved against him or them, the sum of five pounds; and whoever shall disperse or conceal any such book or writings and it be found with him or her or in his or her house, and shall not immediately deliver into the next magistrate, shall forfeit and pay the sum of five pounds for the dispersing or concealing of any such book or writing.

And it is hereby further enacted that if any person within this colony take upon them the heretical opinions of the said Quakers, or any of their books or papers as aforesaid, "ex animo," if legally proved shall be fined for the first time forty shillings, and if they shall persist in the same and shall so again defend it, the second time four pounds; if still notwithstanding they shall again so defend and maintain the said Quakers' heretical opinions, they shall be committed to the house of correction till there be convenient passage to send them out of the land, being sentenced by the Court of assistance to banishment. Lastly, it is hereby ordered that what person or persons soever shall revile the office or person of magistrates or ministers, as is usual with the Quakers, such person or persons shall be severely whipt, or pay the sum of five pounds.

Oct. 15, 1656. (Page 279.) It is ordered that the secretary forthwith issue out a warrant from this Court to the Marshall General or his deputy, to impress a meet boat and sufficient and convenient help to carry down and deliver the Quakers aboard Mr. Locke.

Oct. 14, 1657. (Page 308.) As, in addition to the late order in reference to the coming or bringing in any of the cursed sect of the Quakers into this jurisdiction, it is ordered that whosoever shall from henceforth bring or cause to be brought directly or indirectly any known Quaker or Quakers or other blasphemous Heretics into this jurisdiction, every such person shall forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds to the country, and shall by warrant be committed to prison and there remain until the penalty be satisfied and paid; and if any person or persons within this jurisdiction shall entertain any Quaker or Quakers or other blasphemous heretics, shall forfeit forty shillings for every hours' entertainment and concealment, and shall be committed to prison until the fine is paid: and it is further ordered that if any Quaker or Quakers, after they have once suffered what the law requireth, come into this jurisdiction, every such male

Quaker shall for the first offence have one of his ears cut off and be kept at work in the house of correction till he can be sent away at his charge, and for the second offence have his other ear cut off, and kept at house of correction as aforesaid. And every woman Quaker that hath suffered the law here that shall presume to come into this jurisdiction shall be severely whipt and kept at the house of correction at work till she shall be sent away at her own charge; and so for her coming again she shall be alike used as aforesaid, and for every Quaker, he or she that shall a third time offend, they shall have their tongue bored through with a hot iron and kept at the house of correction close to work till they shall be sent away at their own charge; and it is further ordered that all and every Quaker arising from amongst ourselves shall be dealt with and suffer the like punishment as the law provides for foreign Quakers.

May 19, 1658. (Page 321.) That Quakers and such accursed heretics arising among ourselves may be dealt with according to their deserts, and that their pestilent errors and practices may speedily be prevented, it is hereby ordered that as in addition to the former law against Quakers, that every such person professing any of their pernicious ways by speaking, writing, or by meeting on the Lord's day, or any other time, to strengthen themselves or seduce others to their diabolical doctrines, shall after conviction incur the penalty ensuing, that is, every person so meeting shall pay to the country for every time, ten shillings; and every one speaking in such meeting shall pay five pounds apiece, and in case any such person hath been punished by scourging or whipping the first time according to the former laws, shall be kept at work in the house of correction till they put in security, with two sufficient men, that they shall not any more vent their hateful errors or use their sinful practices, or else shall depart this jurisdiction at their own charges; and if any of them return again, then each person shall incur the penalty of the laws formerly made for strangers.

Oct. 19, 1658. (Page 348.) Whereas this Court, well understanding the dangerous events of the doctrines and practices of the Quakers, hath by law endeavored to prevent the same, but finding that some of them do disperse their papers, so expressing themselves therein as that they may deceive divers of weak capacities and so draw them on to favor their opinions and ways. Now for the further prevention of infection and guiding of people in the truth in reference to such opinions, heresies or blasphemies by them expressed in their books, letters, or by words openly held forth by some of them, the Court judgeth meet that there be a writing or declaration drawn up and printed to manifest the evil of their tenets and dangers of their practices, as tending to the subversion of religion, of church order, and civil government, and the necessity that this government is put upon (for the preservation of religion and their own peace and safety) to exclude such persons from amongst them, who after due means of conviction shall remain obstinate and pertinacious, and this work the Court doth commend to the care and pains of the Rev. Mr. John Norton, speedily to effect.

Oct. 19, 1658. (Page 349.) It is ordered that the Quakers in prison at Ipswich be forthwith sent for; warrant issued out accordingly and return to the warrant made; the Court convened the said Quakers before them and after much endeavor to convince and reform them, ordered that Samuel Shattocke, Lawrence Southwick and Cassandra Southwick his wife, shall be enjoined at their peril to depart out of this jurisdiction before the first day of the Court of election next, which if they neglect or refuse to do, they shall then be banished under pain of death, and if in the meantime they shall transgress against the new law made by this Court against Quakers, they shall be proceeded with as the said law requires; and it is referred to the County Court of Suffolk to declare this sentence to them, and thereupon release them out of prison.

May 11, 1659. (Page 366.) Whereas Daniel and Provided Southwick, son and daughter to Lawrence Southwick, have been fined by the County Courts of Salem and Ipswich, pretending they have no estates, resolving not to work, and others likewise have been fined for siding with the Quakers and absenting themselves from the public ordinances; and in answer to a question what course shall be taken for the satisfaction of the fines, the Court, on perusal of the law title arrests, Resolve that the treasurers of the several counties are, and shall hereby be empowered to sell the said persons to any of the English nation at Virginia or Barbadoes.

May 11, 1659. (Page 367.) It is ordered that Lawrence Southwick and Cassandra his wife, Samuel Shattocke, Nicholas Phelps, Joshua Buffum and Josiah Southwick, hereby are sentenced according to the order of the General Court in October last, to banishment, to depart out of this jurisdiction by the 8th of June next, on pain of death; and if any of them after the 8th of June next, shall be found within this jurisdiction, they shall be apprehended by any constable or other officer, there to lye till the next Court of assistance, when they shall be tried, and being found guilty of the breach of this law, shall be put to death.

Oct. 18, 1659. (Page 383.) It is ordered that William Robinson, Marmaduke Stephenson and Mary Dyer, Quakers now in prison for their rebellion, sedition, presumptuous obtruding themselves upon us, notwithstanding their being sentenced to banishment on pain of death as underminers of this government, etc., shall be brought before this Court for their trials, to suffer the penalty of the law (the just reward of their transgressions), on the morrow morning, being the 19th inst.

William Robinson, Marmaduke Stephenson and Mary Dyer, banished this jurisdiction by the last Court of assistance, on pain of death, being committed by order of the General Court, were sent for, brought to the bar, acknowledge themselves to be the persons banished; after a full hearing of what the prisoners could say for themselves, it was put to the question whether William Robinson, Marmaduke Stephenson and Mary Dyer, the persons now in prison, who have been convicted of being Quakers and banished this jurisdiction on pain of death, should be put to death according as the law provides in that case. The court resolved this question in the affirmative, and the Governor in open Court declared the sentence to William Robinson, that was brought to the bar, "William Robinson, you shall go from whence you came and from thence to the place of execution and there hang till you be dead. The like sentence the Governor in open Court pronounced against Marmaduke Stephenson and Mary Dyer, being brought to the bar one after another, in same words. Whereas William Robinson, Marmaduke Stephenson and Mary Dyer are sentenced by this court to death for their rebellion, etc., it is ordered that the secretary issue out his warrant to Edward Michelson, Marshall General, for repairing to the prison on the 27th of this instant October, and take the said William Robinson, Marmaduke Stephenson and Mary Dyer into his custody and them forthwith by the aid of Captain James Oliver, with one hundred soldiers taken out by his order proportionately out of each company in Boston, armed with pike and musketeer with powder and bullet, to lead them to the place of execution, and there see them hang till they be dead, and in their going, being there, and return, to see all things be carried out peaceably and orderly. Warrants issued out accordingly.

Whereas Mary Dyer is condemned by the General Court to be executed for her offence, on the petition of William Dier, her son, it is ordered that the said Mary Dyer shall have liberty for 48 hours after this day to depart out of this jurisdiction, after which time, being found therein, she is forthwith to be executed, and in the meantime that she be kept a close prisoner till her son or some other be ready to carry her away within the aforesaid time, and it is further ordered that she shall be carried to the place of execution, there to stand with a rope about her neck till the rest be executed, and then returned to the prison and remain as aforesaid.

Oct. 18, 1659. (Page 390.) It is ordered that there shall be a sufficient fence erected about the common prison in Boston, and house of correction, such as may debar persons from conversing with the prisoners, and the charge thereof to be borne half by the county of Suffolk, and the other half by the country; that the treasurer of the county of Suffolk see the same effected.

Oct. 18, 1659. (Page 391.) Whereas Christopher Holder, a Quaker, hath suffered what the law formerly appointed, after being sent to England without punishment, presumptuously coming into this jurisdiction without leave first obtained, the Court judgeth it meete to sentence him to banishment on pain of death; in case he be found within this jurisdiction three days after the next ship now bound from hence to England be departed from this harbor, and between this and the ship's departure, with the keeper at his own charge, he shall have liberty one day in a week to go about his business, and in case he shall choose to go out of this jurisdiction sooner on the penalty aforesaid, he shall by order from the Governor or Deputy Governor be discharged the prison, so as he stay not above three days after his discharge from the prison in this jurisdiction.

Oct. 16, 1660. (Page 432.) For explication of the law or laws referring to the manner of trial of such persons as are found in this jurisdiction after banishment on pain of death, this Court doth judge meete to declare that when any person or persons banished on pain of death shall, after the expiration of their time limited for departure, be found within the limits of this jurisdiction, all Magistrates, Commissioners, Constables and other officers of this jurisdiction, do use their best endeavors for their apprehension and conveying to safe custody, and being there secured, such person or persons shall at the next Court of assistance, whether in ordinary or specially called, according to direction of the law for calling of such Courts, have a legal trial by a jury of twelve men, and being found by evidence of their own confession to be the person or persons formerly sentenced to banishment on pain of death, shall accordingly be sentenced to death and executed by warrant from the Governor or Deputy Governor, directed to the Marshall General, unless they be regularly reprieved in the mean time.

There being some women Quakers now in prison liable to sentence of banishment, whose husbands are innocent persons in that respect as far as we know, and are inhabitants in this jurisdiction, this Court doth order that the said women, named Margaret Smith and Mary Trask, be committed to the house of correction and there kept to constant labor and mean diet, according to the order of said house, until this Court release them, and that the sentence of banishment upon the said persons be suspended, any law to the contrary notwithstanding, unless their husbands shall choose to carry them out of this jurisdiction, and not return without leave first obtained.

In answer to a motion of the Quakers now in prison that they may have their liberty to go for England, the Court judgeth it meete to declare that all the Quakers now in prison shall forthwith have their liberty to go for England in this ship now bound thither if they will, and for such as will not go for England, shall have liberty to depart this jurisdiction within eight days, as they solemnly engage under their hands delivered by them to the Governor or Deputy Governor, that they will not return into this jurisdiction without leave from the Council or General Court first by them obtained.

Whereas Joseph Nicholson and Jane his wife, being two Quakers banished this jurisdiction upon pain of death, and returning some time since into this jurisdiction, were called before the Court, where manifesting their desire to go for England the Court granted liberty to the aforesaid persons for three days to depart this jurisdiction either for England or elsewhere, the said persons accordingly repairing to the ship then bound for England, but by reason of its fullness of the ships lading could not obtain their passage, and on their return tendering themselves to the Governor to be secured in prison until they may get passage for England, another ship being bound for England the undertakers whereof being willing to transport the said persons, the Court grants the said persons liberty to pass for England by the next opportunity, and in the interim to be secured in prison, any law to the contrary notwithstanding.

The court understanding that several inhabitants of this jurisdiction have lodged the Quakers now in prison, do order that the secretary issue out a warrant to the several persons and send the same by messenger of purpose to bring them all with speed to this Court to answer to their offence therein.

May 30, 1660. (Page 419.) The whole court met together, sent for Mary Dyer, who rebelliously after sentence of death passed against her, returned into this jurisdiction; being come before the court she acknowledged herself to be Mary Dyer, the person, and was condemned by this court to death. Being asked what she had to say why that sentence of death should not be executed, she gave no other answer but that she denied our law, came to bear witness against it and could not choose but come and do as formerly. The whole Court met together, voted that the said Mary Dyer, for her rebelliously returning into this jurisdiction (notwithstanding the favor of this court towards her), shall be by the Marshall General on the first day of June, about nine of the clock in the morning, carried to the place of execution and according to the sentence of the General Court in October last, be put to death. That the secretary issue out warrant accordingly, which sentence the Governor declared to her in open Court, and warrant issued out accordingly to Edward Michelson, Marshall General, and to Captain James Oliver and his order as formerly.

May 30, 1660. (Page 419.) Whereas Joseph Nicholson and Jane his wife, Quakers, formerly banished this jurisdiction on pain of death (and being contrary to the sentence of the court, found within the same), were apprehended and committed to prison; this court having called the said Joseph and Jane his wife before them and examined them on grounds of their not departure, do judge meet so far to declare their farther clemency as yet to give them respite on penalty of their former sentence, to depart this jurisdiction by the next fourth day, and if they or either of them after that day shall be found in any part of the same, they shall again be apprehended by any magistrate, commissioner or constable or other person and brought to the prison at Boston, where they shall be kept close prisoners and being legally convicted thereof, shall be put to death.

It is ordered that the Quakers now in prison shall there remain until the next Court of assistance and then they shall be tried by a jury accordingly as the law provides in that case.

Oct. 8, 1662. (Page 59.) This court heretofore for some reasons inducing did judge meete to suspend the laws against Quakers as such, so far as they respect corporal punishment or death, during the Court's pleasure. Now forasmuch as new complaints are made to this Court of such persons abounding, especially in the eastern part, endeavoring to draw away others to that wicked opinion, it is therefore ordered that the last law "title Vagabond Quakers, 1661," be henceforth in force in all respects, provided their whipping be but through three towns, and the Magistrate or Commissioners signing such warrant shall appoint the towns and number of stripes in EACH to be given.

Oct. 21, 1663. (Page 88.) Whereas it is found by experience that there are many who are inhabitants of this jurisdiction which are enemies of all governments, Civil and Ecclesiastical, who will not yield obedience to authority, but make it much of their religion to be in opposition thereto and refuse to bear arms under others, who notwithstanding combine together in some towns and make parties suitable to their designs in election of such persons according to their ends, it is therefore ordered by this Court and the authority thereof, that all persons, Quakers, or others who refuse to attend upon the public worship of God established here, that all such persons whether freemen or others acting as aforesaid shall and hereby are made incapable of voting in all civil assemblies, during their obstinate persisting in such wicked ways and courses, and until certificate be given of their reformation; and it is further ordered that all those fines and mulcts of any such delinquent as aforesaid which are not gathered nor paid to the several treasurers of the Counties, as also what fines shall be laid on them for the future, shall be delivered by the order of the County treasurers respectively to the selectmen of the several towns whereunto they belong, to be by them improved for the poor of the town.

A REVIEW OF THE PAST FROM THE QUAKER STAND-POINT.

Salem, Mass., 9 mo. 30th, 1878.

To the editors of the Observer:—

MY DEAR FRIENDS:—Please allow me, through the columns of thy paper, to present a few facts and reflections brought to mind as I have read, with interest, the report of the exercises in Mechanic Hall, 9 mo. 18th, to commemorate the landing of Gov. Endicott upon our New England coast in the seventeenth century. With much, of course, both of the letter and the spirit of those exercises I am in warm sympathy, but I have been led to see clearly that they present to the public, facts, solemn historical facts, in a somewhat one-sided manner. In simple justice to the present and rising generations, it seems to me that more of the truth, the whole truth, in the case should be stated. Had the scenes of violence and intolerance which marred the annals of the early days of this colony, transpired but ten or twenty years ago, we should consider our Christian faith and dignity and charity not a little compromised, if we came together to celebrate them with song and oration and feast; why should the interval of two hundred and fifty years that has elapsed make us to feel so very differently in the matter? Why not with equal propriety, push this matter of historical research and commemoration yet a little further; perchance we should find a line of descent with some unimportant breaks, running away back, through the years, as far as the founders of the Spanish inquisition.

Now about this time, there were in different parts of England, some ten thousand Quakers, taken from their homes, their vocations, and their meeting-houses, and placed in jails, prisons—honest, industrious, inoffensive and God-fearing people. Many of the prisons were vile and filthy places; oft-times they were placed in the same apartments among murderers and criminals of the lowest order, and numbers of the prisoners died during their incarceration from disease contracted, some being thus shut up for years.

William Penn was about this time committed to Newgate, and in response to Sir John Robinson, who sentenced him and accused him of sedition, he said:—

“We (Friends) have the unhappiness to be misrepresented. But bring me the man that will dare to justify this accusation to my face, and if I am not able to make it appear that it is both my practice and that of all the Friends to instill principles of peace on all occasions, (and war only against spiritual wickedness, that all men may be brought to fear God and work righteousness) I shall contentedly undergo the severest punishment your laws can expose me to. As for the King, I make this offer, if any one living can make appear directly or indirectly from the time I have been called a Quaker (since it is from thence you date my sedition) I have contrived or acted anything injurious to his person, or to the English government, I shall submit my person to your utmost cruelties. But it is hard that being innocent I should be reputed guilty."

Robinson said to him:—"You bring yourself into trouble, heading parties and drawing people after you." Penn responded:—"I would have thee and all men know I scorn that religion which is not worth suffering for, and which is not able to sustain those who are afflicted for it. Mine is, and whatever be my lot I am resigned to the will of God. Thy religion persecutes, mine forgives, and I desire that God may forgive you all that are concerned in my commitment. I leave you, wishing you everlasting salvation." Well, it was natural amid such surroundings and trials that some should be led to leave their native country and seek an asylum in our then wilderness colony. Endicott now had the opportunity to play the part of a hero and a true Christian; but no, he chose rather to be a tyrant and a persecutor; whippings, imprisonment and death here awaited the coming of the poor, down-trodden Quaker. He had them publicly lashed, confined in jails, and three were hung on Boston Common. Between Penn and Endicott it was not so much a question of time, of education, of generation, (for they both figured in the same century,) as of obedience to the Light; the former followed and obeyed, the latter trampled it under foot. And surely these must be rated as days of religious declension when high functionaries in church and state could so far come to "believe a lie," as to give their countenance and their aid to the perpetration and the consummation of the follies, the horrors, and the crimes of the witchcraft delusion.

The names of the three victims mentioned above were William Robinson, Marmaduke Stevenson, and Mary Dyer. William Ledra was also executed later, in another place. Mary Dyer is described as "a person of no mean extract and parentage, of an estate pretty plentiful, of a comely stature and countenance, of a piercing knowledge in many things, of a wonderful sweet and pleasant discourse, fit for great affairs." She was a minister in the society, as were also the other two. Nicholas Upsal, notwithstanding the infirmities of old age, was exiled from Boston in the winter of 1656. "He had ventured to remonstrate with the rulers of Massachusetts, on their passing a law for the banishment of 'that cursed sect of heretics lately risen up in the world, commonly called Quakers,' and prohibiting all commanders of ships, under penalty of a heavy fine, from bringing them into that jurisdiction. Leaving his wife and children and the colony in which long before he had taken refuge from persecution at home, the old man at length reached Rhode Island. Although during many years he had taken deep interest in the particular Puritan congregation of which he was a member, he had found that forms and ceremonies could not satisfy his soul, and on hearing the views maintained by Friends he was "much refreshed."

Rhode Island had, with the assistance of Roger Williams, been purchased by the new sect of Narragansett Indians, and immediately these faithful reformers illustrated their forgiving spirit and true philanthropy by enacting that "none should be accounted a delinquent for doctrine." But no Puritanical power, no human hand, was strong enough to suppress the heaven-implanted and divinely directed zeal of the Friends to share their spiritual treasure with others. About this time six of those who had been driven from Boston the previous year believed that the Lord was calling them thither again, and were assured that He would give them grace to endure any suffering they might have to pass through."

In the summer of 1657, eleven Quakers came to America from England in a little craft called the "Wood house." Their names were Humphrey Norton, Robert Hodshon, Dorothy Waugh, Christopher Holder, William Brend, John Copeland, Richard Doudney, Mary Weatherhead, Sarah Gibbons, Mary Clarke. The master of the ship, Robert Fowler, was also a Friend; five of them landed at New York while the remaining six went on to Rhode Island; others came from time to time. Soon after their arrival John Copeland says in a letter to his parents:

"Take no thought for me. The Lord's power hath overshadowed me, and man I do not fear; for my trust is in the Lord who is become our shield and buckler, and exceeding great reward." Thus did God prepare His youthful servant to suffer for His sake. A few weeks later, Christopher Holder and himself were lying in Boston gaol, without bedding or even straw, lacerated from the effect of thirty lashes barbarously inflicted with a knotted scourge. For three days the gaoler refused to supply them with food or water, but they were sustained by their Saviour, and enabled to rejoice in His manifested love. Being accused as "blasphemers, heretics and deceivers," they issued a declaration of faith, containing the following sentences:—

"In Him do we believe, who is the only begotten Son of the Father, full of grace and truth. And in Him do we trust alone for salvation; by whose blood we are washed from sin; through whom we have access to the Father with boldness, being justified by faith in believing in His name. Who has sent forth the Holy Ghost, to wit, the Spirit of Truth, that proceedeth from the Father and the Son; by which we are sealed and adopted sons and heirs of the kingdom of Heaven.

Believe in the Light, that you may be the children of the light; for as you love it and obey it, it will lead you to repentance, bring you to know Him in whom is remission of sins, in whom God is well pleased; who will give you an entrance into the kingdom of God, an inheritance amongst them that are sanctified." But the Governors would not allow any such assertion to alter their opinion that Quakerism was a dangerous heresy, and terribly rigorous as was the law against its promulgators it was not sufficiently so to satisfy them; for Endicott and Bellingham gave orders that all the Friends then in prison should be severely whipped twice a week. But the humanity of the inhabitants of Boston revolted at this decree, and the sympathy thus aroused led to the release of the sufferers, who were at once banished from the colony. Soon afterwards, John Copeland and his friend, William Brend, were sentenced to a severe scourging while passing through New Plymouth. The age of the latter awoke no compassion in the hearts of the persecutors. The following year after holding several meetings with William Ledra of Barbadoes, he was imprisoned at Boston, and received such brutal beatings, inflicted with a pitched rope, by a gaoler who had previously kept him without food for five days, and most cruelly fettered him for many hours, that he appeared to be dying; Endicott being alarmed at this, sent a physician to him, who thought his recovery impossible. But the hand of an unseen Healer was laid on him, and he must have been at least ninety when, eighteen years later, the following burial note was made out:—"William Brend, of the Liberty of Katherine's, near the Tower, a minister, died Seventh mo., Seventh, 1676, and was buried at Bunhill Fields." Before returning to England he labored in Rhode Island and the West Indies. In 1662 he was one of the many hundred Friends confined in Newgate, fifty-two of whom died in consequence of diseases caused by the loathsome state of that prison. We may form some idea of the heavenly consolation granted to this venerable pilgrim in his hour of need, by his beautiful "salutation of all Friends," from which a brief extract follows:—"It hath been upon my heart, when in the sweet repose of the streams of my Father's love and life, by which my heart hath been overcome, to visit you with a loving salutation from the place of my outward bonds." After bidding them "flock together into our Father's fold, to get into His tent of safety, and lie down in the arms of His dear love," &c., he adds: "Oh, in the love and life of the Lamb, look over all weakness in one another, as God doth look over all the weakness in every one of us, and doth love us for his own Son's sake—in so doing peace will abound in our borders, it will flow forth amongst us like a river, and it will keep out jars, strifes and contentions."

As the Governors of Massachusetts were regardless of old age, so were they of the weakness of women. We read of the astonishment of the people of Boston at hearing Sarah Gibbons and her young friend, Dorothy Waugh, offering praise and thanksgiving for the gracious support granted them during a cruel scourging, three days before and three days after which they were kept without food. A little later, Endicott sentenced Hored Gardner, of Rhode Island, to the punishment of the knotted scourge. She had left her home at Newport, from the belief that her Lord had called her to labor for Him at Weymouth, in Massachusetts, where her ministry was cordially received. The maid who had accompanied her on this perilous journey, to assist in taking charge of her infant, was the victim of a similar sentence, and the only protection granted the baby was that afforded by its mother's arms, who, when the executioner stayed his hand, prayed that her persecutors might be forgiven, because "they knew not what they did." At a later date, Alice Ambros, Mary Tomkins, and Ann Coleman, who was apparently young, and in delicate health, were sentenced to be whipped through eleven towns, covering a distance of nearly eighty miles. Although they were themselves enabled to praise the Lord for the marvellous help He granted them, the sight of their "torn bodies and weary steps" in the third town through which they passed, excited so much pity that one of the inhabitants induced the constable to commit the prisoners and the warrant to his care, and at once set them at liberty. Taking advantage of their unlooked-for release they went to New Quechawanah, where they had a meeting. Subsequently it was for a time feared that Ann Coleman would die from the effect of other barbarous scourgings. To George Fox she writes: "Oh the love of the Lord, who hath kept His handmaid that put her trust in Him; what shall I say unto thee of the love of my Father; none can make me afraid; much service for the Lord in this land, and it hath not been in vain, and so, let thy prayers be unto the Lord for me. In that life and love which is unchangeable art thou near me." Good cause indeed had that patient historian, Sewel, for exclaiming:—"but when should I have done, if I would describe all the whippings inflicted on Quakers in those parts!" Sarah Gibbons and Dorothy Waugh, soon after leaving Boston, returned to Rhode Island, where they had previously been engaged in religious service, and we now find their names associated with that of Mary Dyer. About this time Humphrey Norton was finding a short respite from persecution in the same colony. A few months earlier his ministerial labors had been interrupted by an imprisonment at New Haven, Conn., where his right hand was deeply branded with the letter H, as a sign that he was a condemned heretic, and he was flogged in such a manner as to make some from the crowd, gathered by the beat of drum, exclaim, "do they mean to kill the man?" But He, who of old caused His children to receive "no hurt" in the midst of the seven times heated furnace, wonderfully upheld him in this hour of extremest need, for he states that his "body was as if it had been covered with balm." Much did the people marvel when, at the conclusion of the infliction, he raised his voice in thanksgiving and prayer. Not long after, Humphrey Norton received another scourging in New Plymouth. His rest in Rhode Island was a very short one, for he soon thought it right to go to Boston in company with a young Friend, named John Rous, who had previously been his associate in service, and sometimes in suffering, for their Lord. He was the son of Lieutenant Colonel Rous, a wealthy sugar planter of Barbadoes, who afterwards became a Friend, having, it is said, been much impressed by the ministry of his son. When Humphrey Norton told John Rous that sleep had fled from him because of the sorrow occasioned by a "sense of the strength of the enmity against the righteous seed" in Boston, he also felt that he must bear a part "with the prisoners of hope, which at that time stood bound for the testimony of Jesus." Longing to lose no time, they travelled night and day, and on their arrival at Boston were told of the state in which William Brend then lay from the effect of the gaoler's cruelty, and were begged by their informant to leave the town, or they would be "dead men." But they were bound on a holy mission, from which no human power could turn them aside. "Such was our load," says Humphrey Norton, "that beside Him who laid it upon us, no flesh nor place could ease us." And a few hours later we find him, at the conclusion of the usual lecture of John Norton, a minister who notoriously instigated persecution, beginning an address in these words: "Verily this is the sacrifice which the Lord accepts not; for, whilst with the same spirit that you sin, you preach and pray and sing, that sacrifice is an abomination."

Although a charge of blasphemy could not be proved against him, there was no doubt that his companion and himself were guilty of being Quakers, and as such they were sentenced to imprisonment and whipping. The former, as the son of Lieutenant Colonel Rous, who had formerly resided in the colony, was at first courteously treated by the magistrates, who hoped they might induce this young champion of the Cross to cast aside "the heresy" he was upholding. But, notwithstanding their flattery, he steadfastly maintained his ground, vindicated the doctrines which he had adopted, and, as an English citizen, claimed the right of a trial in an English Court. But the Governors, well knowing what an alarming exposure of their conduct towards Friends would be involved by this, would not hear of such a course. "No appeal to England! No appeal to England!" was their cry. Three days later the prisoners underwent the flogging to which they had been condemned; but when this punishment was soon renewed, the public indignation, already aroused by the treatment of William Brend, became so strong that it soon led to the liberation of the prisoners. In the midst of all afflictions the Friends were aided by the belief that their labors and sufferings were not in vain in the Lord. In a letter to Margaret Fell, John Rous says: "A firm foundation is there laid in this land, such a one as the devil will never get broken up." He writes, when again in Boston prison, where, about a fortnight later, he and his companions, John Copeland and Christopher Holder, underwent the mutilation of having the right ear cut off. Shall we shrink from reading their sufferings when we see the spirit with which they were enabled to endure them? "In the strength of God," is their language, "we suffered joyfully, having freely given up not one member, but all, if the Lord so required, for the sealing of our testimony, which the Lord hath given us;" words which may recall those of Brainerd with regard to his prayers for his brother and himself—"My heart sweetly exulted in the thought of any distresses that might light on him or me, in the advancement of Christ's kingdom upon earth."

So on, and on, and on, runs the record of the inhuman cruelty of these early magistrates, a record which was most carefully avoided at the proceedings of the late celebration; but I hasten on to conclude the narration:—

Early in 1659, William Robinson, who had been preaching in Virginia, where his ministry was much blest, and Marmaduke Stevenson, who had lately come from Barbadoes, felt required of the Lord to go to Boston; the former receiving a clear revelation that his life would be taken, he writes: "Obedience was demanded of me by the Lord, who filled me with living strength and power from His heavenly presence which at that time did mightily overshadow me, and my life did say amen to what the Lord required of me." The two young ministers arrived at Boston on one of the public fast days, and were soon arrested. Like the apostles of old they tarried or they journeyed as they were restrained or constrained by the Spirit of the Lord. In a letter to George Fox from Boston gaol, Wm. Robinson writes: "Oh! my dearly beloved, thou who art endued with power from on High, who art of a quick discerning in the fear of God; oh, remember us—let thy prayers be put up unto the Lord God for us, that His power and strength may rest with us and upon us, that faithful we may be preserved to the end. Amen.

Soon the aged Mary Dyer arrived at Boston, constrained to carry comfort and cheer to her captive fellow-believers there, and was shortly imprisoned also. A Friend, writing with reference to their preaching before imprisonment, says:—"Divers were convinced, the power of the Lord accompanying them, and with astonishment confounded their enemies before them; great was their service abroad in that jurisdiction for four weeks and upwards." Being brought before the Governor, Wm. Robinson asked leave to read an explanation which he had prepared:—"After describing the heavenly intimation he had received that it was God's will that he should lay down his life for the cause of Christ, he writes: I, being a child, durst not question the Lord in the least, and as the Lord made me willing, dealing gently and kindly with me as a tender father by a faithful child whom he tenderly loves, so the Lord did deal with me in ministering his life unto me, which gave and gives me strength to perform what the Lord required of me. Therefore all who are ignorant of the motion of the Lord in the inward parts be not hasty in judging in this matter. The presence of the Lord and his heavenly life doth accompany me so that I can say in truth, Blessed be the Lord God of my life who hath counted me worthy and called me hereunto. Will ye put us to death for obeying the Lord, the God of the whole earth?"

Endicott took up this document, and after reading it pronounced sentence of death on its writer. A few days before his execution, in an epistle addressed "to the Lord's people," Wm. Robinson says: "The streams of my Father's love run daily through me, from the Holy Fountain of life to the seed throughout the whole relation. I am overcome with love, for it is my life and length of days ; it is my glory and my daily strength. I am full of the quickening power of the Lord Jesus Christ. I shall enter with my Beloved into eternal rest and peace, and I shall depart with everlasting joy in my heart and praises in my mouth."

After Marmaduke Stevenson had received his sentence, he solemnly addressed the magistrates, concluding with these words: "Assuredly if you put us to death you will bring innocent blood upon your own heads, and swift destruction will come upon you." It is a remarkable fact that many of these persecutors came to an untimely end, or were visited by severe personal calamities which resulted in death. "The hand or judgment of the Lord is upon me," were the words of John Norton, who, whilst walking in his own house, leant his head against a chimney piece and sank down never to speak again. And Major General Adderton, who had scoffingly said "the judgments of the Lord God are not come upon us yet," was overtaken by a sudden and shocking death.

During his imprisonment, Marmaduke Stevenson wrote his "Call to the Work and Service of the Lord," and not losing sight of his old friends he prepared an address to his "neighbors and the people of the town of Shiptown, Weighton and elsewhere." A few days before his execution he wrote a letter "to the Lord's people" from which the following extracts are taken:

"Lambs of my Father's fold and sheep of His pasture, the remembrance of you is precious to me, my dearly beloved ones—who are reconciled to God, and one to another, in that which sea and land cannot separate; here you may feel me knit and joined to you in the spirit of truth, and linked to you as members of His body, who is our Head and Rock of sure defence; here we are kept safe in the hour of temptation, and in the day of trial shall we be preserved in the hollow of His hand; here His banner of love will be over us So, my dear friends, let us always wait at the altar of the Lord, to see the table spread, that so we may sit down and eat together, and be refreshed with the hidden manna that comes from Him who is our life, our peace, our strength and our preserver, night and day. Oh, my beloved ones! let us all go on in His strength, who is our Prince and Saviour If I forget you, then let the Lord forget me. Nay, verily you cannot be forgotten by me; so long as I abide in the Vine I am a branch of the same nature with you, which the Lord hath blessed; we grow together in His life and image, as members of His body, where we shall live together to all eternity."

After Mary Dyer had heard her sentence she only replied by the significant words, "The will of the Lord be done." And when Endicott impatiently exclaimed "Take her away, Marshal," she added, "Yea, joyfully I go;" for her heart was filled with heavenly consolation from the love of Christ, and from the thought that she was counted worthy to suffer for His sake. She told the marshal that it was unnecessary for him to guard her to the prison. "I believe you, Mrs. Dyer," he answered, "but I must do as I am commanded." From the House of Correction she addressed "An appeal to the Rulers of Boston," in which she asks nothing for herself, but manifests—as an anonymous writer remarks—"the courage of an apostle contending for the truth, and the tenderness of a woman feeling for the sufferings of her people." She writes: "I have no self ends, the Lord knoweth; for if my life were freely granted by you, it would not avail me, so long as I should daily hear or see the sufferings of my dear brethren." It is said that on the day preceding that appointed for the execution, Mary Dyer's oldest son arrived at Boston, and was allowed to remain all night with his mother. He came in the vain hope of inducing her to make such concessions as might be the means of saving her life.

The erection of gallows on Boston Common for these guiltless victims awakened such strong feelings of amazement and indignation amongst the inhabitants, as to give alarm to the magistrates. On the morning of the day appointed for the execution a great number of people gathered round the prison, and gave earnest attention to William Robinson, who addressed them from an open window of an upper room. But the rulers, who always studiously endeavored to prevent the Friends from holding intercourse with the colonists, were afraid for the crowd to listen, at this crisis, to Quaker preaching, and accordingly sent a military captain to disperse them. Finding this impracticable, he entered the gaol in a violent passion, and hurling some of the prisoners down stairs, shut them into a low, dark cell. One of this little company writes: "As we sat together waiting upon the Lord, it was a time of love, for as the world hated us, so the Lord was pleased in a wonderful manner to manifest His supporting love, and kindness to us in our innocent sufferings; especially to the worthies who had now finished their course God was with them, and many sweet and heavenly sayings they gave unto us, being themselves filled with comfort. While we were yet embracing each other, with full and tender hearts, the officers came in and took the two from us (Robinson and Stevenson) as sheep for the slaughter."

Boston Common was separated by the distance of a mile from the gaol, and the prisoners were escorted by two hundred men, armed with halberds, guns, swords and pikes—in addition to many horsemen. It was thought the safest arrangement for this procession to avoid the direct thoroughfare through the city, and the drummers were ordered immediately before the three captives, and to beat more loudly if they should attempt to speak. Thus when William Robinson did so, the only words which were audible were, "This is your hour, and the power of darkness." Marmaduke Stevenson's voice was drowned by the same means. "Yet they went on," as Sewel says, "with great cheerfulness, as if going to an everlasting wedding"—which indeed they were. In reply to a coarse taunt from the marshal, Mary Dyer said: "This is to me an hour of the greatest joy I ever had in this world. No ear can hear, no tongue can utter, no heart can understand, the sweet incomes and the refreshings of the spirit of the Lord which I now feel." Having bade farewell to his friends and mounted the scaffold, William Robinson addressed the assembled crowd: "We suffer not as evil doers, but as those who have testified and manifested the Truth. This is the day of your visitation, and therefore I desire you to mind the light of Christ which is in you, to which I have borne testimony and am now going to seal my testimony with my blood." Wilson, a minister of the city, changing the scoffing tone he had assumed whilst they were walking to the Common, now exclaimed—"Hold thy tongue; be silent; thou art going to die with a lie in thy mouth." After the executioner had adjusted the rope, William Robinson said, "Now are ye made manifest; I suffer for Christ in whom I live and for whom I die." Marmaduke Stevenson also spoke a few words to the spectators: "Be it known unto you all this day, that we suffer, not as evil doers, but for conscience sake. This day shall we all be at rest with the Lord."

The friends of the martyrs were not allowed to provide coffins for them, nor even to enclose the pit into which the bodies were thrown. Wilson, the minister to whom allusion has already been made, composed a scoffing song on the sufferers. But no amount of indignity which might be heaped upon them could prevent their death from being a solemn attestation to the futility of every effort of a blind bigotry to crush the conscience of those who, bearing the image and superscription of Christ, rendered unto God the things that are God's and consequently with regard to these "things" acknowledged no ruler but him in whose kingdom their spirits dwelt. So deep an impression was made on John Chamberlain, an inhabitant of Boston, by what he saw and heard that day, as to cause his conviction of the truth of the doctrines held by Friends; before two years were over he had been imprisoned, banished, and also cruelly whipped through three towns; yet his Saviour suffered not his faith to fail, for we learn that this persecution "so far from beating him from the truth rather drove him nearer to it."

After Mary Dyer had ascended the ladder, she was told that if she would return home her life should be spared. "Nay," she answered, "I cannot; for in obedience to the will of the Lord I came, and in his will I abide faithful unto death." To the charge of being guilty of her own blood, she replied: "Nay, I came to take blood guiltiness from you, desiring you to repeal the unrighteous and unjust law; therefore my blood will be required of your hands who wilfully do it." When asked if she wished any of the people to pray for her she said that she desired the prayers of all the people of God; and to the proposal that an Elder should do so, she answered: "Nay—first a child, then a young man, then a strong man, before (being) an Elder in Christ Jesus." When accused of having said she had been in Paradise, she replied without hesitation, "Yea, I have been in Paradise these several days." The few more words she spoke were on the everlasting happiness now so near at hand. A Friend, who had united in her ministerial services on Shelter Island, sums up his description of her by saying: "She even shined in the image of God."

Some eight or nine months later, Wm. Ledra, who is said to have been a Cornishman, though his home was in Barbadoes, was condemned to death for having returned to Boston after sentence of banishment. When in 1658, after mutual labors for their Lord, he had shared the imprisonment of his friend William Brend in an unventilated cell—the cruelty of which he had been the victim had imperilled his life; and now, notwithstanding the inclemency of a New England winter, he was kept chained in an open prison. On the day before his death he addressed a letter to "the little flock of Christ" in which he remarks that he was filled "with the joy of the Lord in the beauty of holiness, whilst his spirit was wholly swallowed up in the bosom of eternity. As the flowing of the ocean (he continues) doth fill every creek and branch thereof, and then retires again towards its own being and fulness, and leaves a savour behind it; so doth the life and virtue of God flow into every one of your hearts, whom he hath made partakers of His Divine nature." Alluding to his tender yearnings for the young he says: "Stand in the watch within in the fear of the Lord, which is the very entrance of wisdom and the state wherein you are ready to receive the secrets of the Lord. Hunger and thirst patiently, be not weary, neither doubt; stand still and cease from thy own workings, and in due time thou shalt enter into rest and thy eyes shall behold His salvation. Confess Him before men; bring all things to the light that they may be proved whether they are wrought in God. Without grace possessed there is no assurance of salvation. By grace you are saved." The following day the fetters which had so long bound him were knocked off, and we are told that he went "forth to the slaughter in the meekness of the Spirit of Jesus." He was surrounded by soldiers in order to prevent intercourse with his friends; but before mounting the scaffold he exhorted one of them to faithfulness, and on bidding him farewell added, "all that will be Christ's disciples must take up His cross." A visitor to the city, from England, who witnessed this scene, having asked leave to speak, said: "Gentlemen, I am a stranger both to your persons and country, yet a friend of both. For the Lord's sake take not away the man's life, but remember Gamaliel's counsel to the Jews: 'If it be of men it will come to nought; but if it be of God ye cannot overthrow it; be careful ye are not found fighters against God.'" This courageous stranger also told them that they had "no warrant from the word of God, nor precedent from our country, nor power from His Majesty to hang the man."

William Ledra's last words were, "I commend my righteous cause unto Thee, O God! Lord Jesus receive my spirit." A few weeks before his death he wrote the following testimony to the willingness of God to supply all the need of his faithful followers:—"I testify in the fear of the Lord God that the noise of the whip on my back, all the imprisonments, and the loud threatenng of a halter, did no more affright me, through the strength and power of God, than if they had threatenng to have bound a spider's web on my finger—which makes me say with unfeigned lips, wait upon the Lord O my soul!" Like Josiah Southwick of Salem, he might have said, "Tongue cannot express the goodness and love of God to his suffering people." "Here is my body" were the words of the latter when sentenced to a severe scourging, "if you want a further testimony to the truth I profess, take it and tear it in pieces; your sentence is no more terrifying to me than if you had taken a feather and blown it in the air."

On the day of William Ledra's execution, Wenlock Christison, of Salem, was placed at the bar; he also had experienced, as Milton says, of those days that

"Heavy persecution shall arise
On all, who in the worship persevere
Of spirit and truth."

Although exiled on pain of death, he had reappeared at Boston and caused such consternation by entering the court just as sentence of death was being pronounced on his friend, as to cause perfect silence for a while. When now in his turn condemned to die, he said, "The will of the Lord be done. If you have power to take my life from me the which I question, I believe you shall never more take Quaker's lives from them. Note my words."

Just at this crisis the rulers of Massachusetts received tidings from England which caused a sudden change in their conduct; for on the day preceding that which had been fixed on for the execution of Wenlock Christison, he and twenty-seven other Friends were set at liberty; and after two of them had been whipped through the town they were taken by a body of soldiers out of the jurisdiction. Would it not be a false refinement of feeling to be unwilling to contemplate the sufferings which, not young and strong men only, but tender and delicate women were enabled to endure for Christ? Moreover, is there not instruction for us in this:—

“Mournful record of an earlier age,
That pale and half effaced lies hidden away
Beneath the fresher writing of to-day.”

“Thou shalt lose thy life and find it,
Thou shalt boldly cast it forth;
And then back again receiving,
Know it in its endless worth.”

And here I close my recital of Puritan barbarities, a designation which in truth and justice I feel to apply—a record of cruelty which for atrocity has probably never been exceeded on the American continent; except possibly in the cases of Andersonville horrors during the late war, and the brutal practices of slave masters under the old slave-holding oligarchy.

Compare now for a moment the early days of Massachusetts and Pennsylvania.—Here was strife, contention and constant affright from Indian alarms; there, Penn arrived in 1682 and made his famous treaty with the Indians, in the which they pledged themselves in their strong, quaint language "to live in love with Onas, (Penn) and his children as long as the sun and moon shall endure." I quote from Penn's biography: "When the account of this treaty reached Europe most of her politicians awaited with sneering smiles the consummation they expected to follow. Going among the cruel Indian savages without arms, and pledging themselves never to use violence towards them! What folly! What madness!" But they waited and watched long, and still no violence or bloodshed ensued. Whilst the surrounding colonists were ever and anon at war with the Indians, and the scalping-knife and tomahawk brought death and terror to many a hearth, the Quakers of Pennsylvania and all their possessions remained uninjured.

Safe that quiet Eden lay,
When the war-whoop stirred the land;
Thence the Indian turned away
From their homes his bloody hand.

"He remembered the treaty with the sons of Onas and kept it inviolate." The Friends of Pennsylvania on their side acted truthfully and honestly towards the red men; and the Indian people, even when at war with other English colonies, and when the original parties to the treaty had died off, regarded the lives and property of the children of Onas as sacred. Such was the treaty of peace and amity of which Voltaire remarked that "it was the only one ever made without an oath, and the only one that never was broken." Whittier writes:—

“ The Quaker of the olden time !
 So calm, and firm, and true,
 Unspotted by its wrong and crime,
 He walked the dark earth through ;
 The lust of power, the love of gain,
 The thousand lures of sin
 Around him had no power to stain
 The purity within.

With that deep insight which detects
 All great things in the small,
 And knows how each man's life affects
 The spiritual life of all,
 He walked by faith and not by sight.
 By love and not by law ;
 The presence of the wrong or right,
 He rather felt than saw.

He felt that wrong with wrong partakes,
 That nothing stands alone,
 That whoso gives the motive makes
 His brother's sin his own ;
 And, pausing not for doubtful choice
 Of evils great or small,
 He listened to that inward voice
 Which calls away from all.

Oh ! spirit of that early day,
 So pure and strong and true,
 Be with us in the narrow way
 Our faithful fathers knew ;
 Give strength the evil to forsake,
 The cross of truth to bear,
 And love and reverent fear to make
 Our daily lives a prayer.”

Had Gov. Endicott listened as attentively to the Voice of Eternal Truth, Justice and Mercy within his breast, and obeyed this light of Christ in the soul, as faithfully as did William Penn, in Pennsylvania, our

New England colony would have been spared those blood-stains upon her name and her fame—the massacre of Indian tribes, and the persecution of Quaker and Baptist settlers. Penn came as an ambassador of the Prince of Peace, and proved himself by his deeds to be one. Endicott, seeking to “serve two masters—God and Mammon,” at times allowed the love of fame and earthly power to dim and utterly obscure his spiritual vision. So this same determination to erect a state, to found a nation, at any cost, led on step by step to the perpetration of that national crime, the War of the American Revolution, which was a deliberate setting aside of the Gospel command,—“But I say unto you that ye resist not evil; but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.” And likewise that solemn admonition of our Lord:—“My kingdom is not of this world. If my kingdom were of this world, then would my servants fight.”—A crime as clearly the forerunner of our national woes, as that pain and suffering are sure to follow in the train of disobedience.

The Ship of State was launched amid bloodshed and animosity, and hatred, and therefore the establishment and perpetuation of slavery, for so many years in the Southern states, with its blighting influences, as well as the upheavals and terrors of the great rebellion, were but the natural fruit of the tree just planted, and the legitimate consequences of the first sinning.

If we owe something (and we do) to the sturdy morals of the Puritan, we certainly are equally indebted to the character of those obscure Quakers, who right at the time, at the peril of their lives, protested faithfully, earnestly and conscientiously, against blind and short-sighted bigotry, and against practices and methods which, though Christian in name, were in reality little better than Pagan. These hated and despised ones were true Protestants, holding up in the midst of opposition and persecution, the great truths of the gospel in their simplicity and purity. They were faithful ministers, preachers, witnesses; their Lord owned them, and His peace was their portion. "Little ones," they may have been, but their Master pronounced positive condemnation against any who should "offend one such." We desire to judge no man, or men, uncharitably, wishing always to be found in the mind and of the spirit of Him "who, when He was reviled, reviled not again;" but this same "High Priest," the "Son sent of the Father," hath declared, as touching harm done to His lowly followers: "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye have done it unto me."

So, if praises and adulation are to-day so lavishly bestowed upon these ancient blinded guides, surely one little word of explanation, one little word of commendation, one little word of blessing, is due to the memory of those innocents slain at the hands of the Puritan governor and his associates; and though we, their spiritual descendents, (the New England Yearly Meeting of Friends), may have but a fraction of the faith, courage, fortitude and patience of these, our fore-fathers in the Truth, yet, in the exercise of that fraction, it becomes our duty, boldly to state their case, and hold up the bright example of their lives of self-denial, even in these latter days!

And to-day, amid the enjoyment of civil and religious liberty, are we not to look back with as much of gratitude, because of their "faithfulness unto death," as for the deeds and misdeeds of the Pilgrim fathers?

Truly thy friend,

HENRY A. CHASE.

HISTORY OF THE PEOPLE CALLED QUAKERS.

By John Gough, published, 1790, in Dublin, Ireland.
Vol. I: Lawrence and Cassandra Southick, their sufferings, p. 349, 361; Josiah Southick, p. 349, 361; Daniel and Provided ordered to be sold for slaves, 376 to 381.

THE severities already inflicted on the members of this society had so affected many of the inhabitants of this colony that they withdrew from their public assemblies and met on the first day of the week, to worship quietly by themselves, for which they were fined 5 shillings per week, and imprisoned. Particularly Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick, an aged couple (who in the last year had been imprisoned and fined for entertaining Christopher Holder and John Copeland), with their son Joseph, were sent to the house of correction, whipped in like manner as those before mentioned, and had their goods taken to the value of £4, 15 shillings, for not coming to church. For the same cause Edward Harnet, aged 69, and his wife, 73 years of age, had 37 shillings taken from them without regard to their circumstances, which were but mean, or their age, which would naturally excite tenderness. About this time (1658) there was a meeting at the house of Nicholas Phelps in the woods about five miles from Salem, and upon the information of one Butler, the six following residents were taken up and committed to prison: Samuel Shattock, Lawrence Southwick and Cassandra his wife, Josiah their son, Samuel Gaskin (or Gaskill), and Joshua Buffum, who being kept close in the house of correction during the heat of the Summer, from their husbandry, after three weeks confinement, represented their case to the court in the following letter:

This to Magistrates at the Court in Salem. Friends:—Whereas it was your pleasure to commit us, whose names are under-written, to the house of correction in Boston, although the Lord, the righteous Judge of Heaven and Earth, is our witness that we have done nothing worthy of stripes or of bonds; and we being committed by your court to be dealt withal as the law provides for foreign Quakers, as ye please to term us; and having some of us suffered your law and pleasures, now that which we do expect is, That whereas we have suffered your law, so now to be set free by the same law, as your manner is with strangers, and not to put us on the account of one law, and execute another law upon us, of which according to your own manner we were never convicted, as the law expresses. If you had sent us upon the account of your new law, we should have expected the jailer's order to have been on that account, which that it was not, appears by the warrant which we have, and the punishment which we bare, as four of us were whipped, among whom was one that had formerly been whipped; so now according to your former law, friends, let it not be a small thing in your eyes, the exposing as much as in you lies, our families to ruin. It is not unknown to you, the season and the time of year, for those that live of husbandry, and what their cattle and families may be exposed unto; and also such as live upon trade. We know if the spirit of Christ did dwell and rule in you these things would take impression on your spirits. What our lives and conversations have been in that place is well known, and what we now suffer for, is much for false reports, and ungrounded jealousies of heresy and sedition. These things lie upon us to lay before you. As for our parts we have true peace and rest in the Lord in all our sufferings, and are made willing in the power and strength of God, freely to offer up our lives in this cause of God, for which we suffer: yea, and we do find (through grace) the enlargement of God in our imprisoned state, to whom alone we commit ourselves and our families, for the disposing of us according to his infinite wisdom and pleasure, in whose love is our rest and life. From the house of bondage in Boston wherein we are made captives by the wills of men, although made free by the Son, (John 8, 36).

In which we quietly rest, this 16th of the 5th month, 1658.

LAWRENCE SOUTHICK, JOSIAH SOUTHICK,
CASSANDRA SOUTHICK, SAMUEL SHATTOCK,
JOSHUA BUFFUM."

The first victims to this severe law were Lawrence and Cassandra Southick, their son Josiah, Samuel Shattock, Nicholas Phelps and Joshua Buffum. They were called before the court 11th of 3rd mo., 1659, and on their trial (such as it was), the same arbitrary spirit of tyranny appeared in their manner of executing as in passing their laws. The prisoners making a rational objection to their proceeding against them by their law as being in custody when it was made, and therefore as to them an ex post facto law. To their query whether it was for an offence against that law which then had no existence, they were committed to prison and banished, they received no reply; then one of them desired the governor that he would be pleased to declare before the people the real and true cause of their proceedings against them. He answered, it was for contemning authority in not coming to the ordinances of God. He further charged them with rebelling against the authority of the country in not departing according to their order; to which they answered they had no other place to go, but had their wives, children, families and estates to look after; nor had they done anything worthy of death, banishment or bonds, or any of the hardships or ignominious punishments which they had suffered in their persons, beside the loss of one hundred pound's worth of their property 'taken from them for meeting together. This remonstrance of their recent accumulated injuries silencing the Governor, Major General Denison made this unanswerable reply, that they stood against the authority of the country in not submitting to their laws, that he should not go about to speak much of the error of their judgements but added he, you and we are not able well to live together, at present the power is in our hand, and therefore the strongest must fend off. After this the prisoners were put forth for a while, and being called in again, the sentence of banishment was pronounced against them, and no more than a fortnight's time allowed for them to depart on pain of death; and although they desired a respite to attend to their affairs and till an opportunity of a convenient passage to England might occur, the unrelenting malice of their persecutors would not grant them even this small and reasonable request; so Samuel Shattock, Nicholas Phelps, and Josiah Southick were obliged to take an opportunity that offered four days after, to pass for England by Barbadoes, in order to seek redress from the parliament and council of state there, but without success.

Lawrence and Cassandra Southick went to Shelter Island, where they soon died, within three days of each other; and Joshua Buffum retired to Rhode Island. The proceedings of these haughty rulers are strongly marked throughout with the features of self-importance, inhumanity and bitter malignity, but I know of no instance of a more persevering malice and cruelty, than that wherewith they persecuted the aforesaid Lawrence and Cassandra Southick and their family. First, while members of their church, they were both imprisoned for entertaining strangers, Christopher Holder and John Copeland, a christian duty which the apostle to the Hebrews advises not to be unmindful of; and after seven weeks imprisonment, Cassandra was fined 40 shillings for owning a paper written by the aforesaid persons. Next, for absenting from the public worship and owning the Quakers' doctrine, on the information of one Captain Hawthorne, they, with their son Josiah, were sent to the house of correction and whipped in the coldest season of the year, and at the same time Hawthorne issued his warrant to distrain their goods for absence from their public worship, whereby there were taken from them cattle to the value of £4, 15 shillings. Again they were imprisoned, with others, for being at a meeting, and Cassandra was again whipped, and upon their joint letter to the magistrates before recited, the other appellants were released, but this family, although they with the rest had suffered the penalty of their cruel law fully, were arbitrarily detained in prison to their great loss and damage, being in the season of the year when their affairs most immediately demanded their attendance; and last of all were banished upon pain of death, as before recited, by a law made while they were imprisoned. Thus despoiled of their property, deprived of their liberty, driven into banishment, and in jeopardy of their lives, for no other crime than meeting apart and dissenting from the established worship, the sufferings of this inoffensive aged couple ended only with their lives. But the multiplied injuries of this harmless pair were not sufficient to gratify that thirst for vengeance which stimulated these persecutors, while any member of the family remained unmolested. During their detention in prison they left at home a son Daniel and a daughter Provided; these children, not deterred by the unchristian treatment of their parents and brother, felt themselves rather encouraged to follow their steps and relinquish the assemblies of a people whose religion was productive of such relentless persecution; for their absence from which they were fined £10, though it was well known that they had no estate, their parents having been reduced to poverty by repeated fines and extravagant distrainments; wherefore to satisfy the fine they were ordered to be sold for bond-slaves by the following mandate: "Whereas Daniel Southick and Provided Southick, son and daughter of Lawrence Southick, absenting themselves from the public ordinances, having been fined by the courts of Salem and Ipswich, pretending they have no estates and resolving not to work, the court upon perusal of a law which was made upon account of debts, in answer to what should be done for the satisfaction of the fines, resolves, that the treasurers of the several counties are, and shall be fully empowered to sell the said persons to any of the English Nation at Virginia or Barbadoes, to answer the said fines." Pursuant to this order, Edward Butler, one of the treasurers, sought out for a passage for them to Barbadoes for sale, but could find none willing to take them thither. One master of a ship to whom he applied, in order to evade a compliance, pretended they would spoil the ship's company. Butler replied, no, you do not fear that, for they are poor harmless creatures that will not hurt anybody. The master rejoined, will you then offer to make slaves of such harmless creatures? and declined the invidious office of transporting them, as well as the rest. Disappointed in his designs and at a loss how to dispose of them, the winter approaching, he sent them home to shift for themselves till he could find a convenient opportunity to send them away.

Is it strange that a few people became excited unto insanity, after such terrible outrages upon themselves and friends, as to appear naked in public; rather is it not a wonder that more were not made insane?

FIRST GENERATION.

LAWRENCE SOUTHWICK¹. There is a tradition in the Southwick family that Lawrence came from Lancashire, England, to America in 1627, and returned to England and brought his wife Cassandra and son John and daughter Mary to Massachusetts in 1630, on the May Flower, in company with Wm. Bradford and others, and settled at Salem, Mass. We do not find any mention of his name in the public records of Salem until 1639, when he and his family were admitted as members in the First Church of Salem, and two acres of land was given him by the town of Salem to carry on the business of manufacturing glass and earthen ware. There is a tradition that he was one of the first to manufacture glass in America. This two acres of land was called glass-house field, as there were two others engaged in the same business, and the land is so designated to-day on the records and maps of said property, although the manufacture has long ceased to be carried on there. Said land is a valley running easterly from Aborn Street, and is on the south side of what is called Gallows Hill, where several persons were hung during the Salem Witchcraft delusion, a very dark page in the history of sectarian bigotry in Massachusetts.

Lawrence and wife Cassandra and son Josiah and daughter Mary were fined, whipt, imprisoned and finally banished for being Quakers, and their son Daniel and daughter Provided were sentenced by the General Court to be sold into slavery. Lawrence and wife Cassandra went to Shelter Island, Long Island Sound, being banished under pain of death in 1659, and died there in the spring of 1660 from privation and exposure; his wife died three days after him. Their son Josiah went to Rhode Island and established a home for himself and family. He came back to Salem in 1660 to look after his parents' property and found the property in very poor condition, and was whipped for returning to Massachusetts. It seems incredible that any followers of Christ could have so belied their professions, but it was an illustration of the saying of Robert Pollock, in regard to the hypocrite,

“Who stole the livery of the Court of Heaven
To serve the Devil in.”

In presence of

 THOMAS HARRIS, LAWRENCE SETHICK.
 WILLIAM DURAND,

This will was allowed by the court 29, 9 mo., 1660.

attest

HILLARD VEREN, Clericus.

Lawrence and Cassandra* Southwick, both baptised 2 mo., 24th, 1639, at First Church, Salem. Their children were:

2. John², born 1620, died Oct. 25, 1672; married first, Sarah Tidd; second, Hannah Flint; third, Sarah Burnett (or Burnell).
3. Mary², born 1630; married Henry Trask, son of Capt. Wm Trask.
4. Josiah², born 1632, died 1693; married Mary —.

* Cassandra, according to Homeric Legend, was the fairest daughter of Priam and Hecuba, and the twin sister of Helenus. The children playing in the court of the temple of the Thymbrucan Apollo, not far from Illium, till it was too late for them to return home, a bed of laurel twigs was made for them in the temple, and there in the morning two snakes were found licking their ears, from which resulted such an acuteness of hearing that they could hear the voice of the Gods. Cassandra afterward attracted the love of Apollo by her beauty, and he taught her the secrets of prophecy; but displeased by her rejection of his suit, laid upon her the curse that her vaticinations should never be believed. Accordingly she prophesied in vain of the treachery of the Grecian horse and the destruction of Troy. On the capture of the city she fled to the temple of Minerva, and being captured she fell to the share of Agamemnon, to whom she bore twins, but she was murdered by Clytemnestra.—Chamber's Encyclopedia.

April 8, 1659, Lawrence Southwick of Salem bought of Edward Lummus, of Ipswich, 3 acres of land.—Salem Records.

Henry F. Waters, of Salem, Mass., says: "The names Southwick and Eastuic (Eastwic), found on our Salem records both suffered more or less change by the slighting of the w; the former occasionally appears as Sethick, Southerick, Suderick, etc., and the latter being rather fixed as Estick."

"In 1639 there were two acres of land set off for each of the persons Annanias Conklin, Obediah Holmes, and Lawrence Southwick; and there was granted to the glass men several acres of ground adjoining to their houses. This was in the neighborhood of Aborn street and near Strong Water Brook," (now, 1881, Salem and Peabody).—Felt's Annals of Salem.

Daniel Appleton White's records, First Church, Salem: "This covenant was renewed by the church on a solemn day of humiliation, March 6, 1660, when also considering the power of temptation amongst us by reason of ye Quaker doctrine to the leavening of some in the place where we act and endangering of others, doe see cause to remember the admonition of our Saviour Christ to his disciples,

Matt. 16, 'take heed and beware of ye leaven of the doctrine of the Pharisees', and do judge so far as we understand it yt ye Quaker doctrine is as bad or worse than that of ye Pharisees, Therefore we do covenant by the help of Jesus Christ to take heed and beware of the leaven of the doctrine of the Quakers."

What an impious act, as the Quakers have no creed.

“CASSANDRA SOUTHWICK.”

THIS ballad, by John G. Whittier, has its foundation upon a somewhat remarkable event in the history of Puritan intolerance. Two young persons, son (Daniel) and daughter (Provided) of Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick, of Salem, who had himself been imprisoned and deprived of all his property for having entertained two Quakers at his house, were fined ten pounds each for non-attendance at church, which they were unable to pay. The case being represented to the General Court, at Boston, that body issued an order, which may still be seen on the court records, bearing the signature of Edward Rawson, Secretary, by which the treasurer of the County was “fully empowered to sell the said persons to any of the English nation at Virginia or Barbadoes, to answer said fines.” An attempt was made to carry this barbarous order into execution, but no shipmaster was found willing to convey them to the West Indies.—Vide Scovall's History, pp. 225-6, G. Bishop.

THE ATTEMPTED SALE INTO SLAVERY OF DANIEL AND PROVIDED SOUTHWICK, SONS OF LAWRENCE AND CASSANDRA SOUTHWICK.
BY GOV. ENDICOTT AND HIS MINIONS, FOR THE SAKE OF THE LONG QUAKERS.

To the God of all sure mercies let my blessing rise to-day,
 From the scoffer and the cruel He hath plucked the spoil away,— Yea, He who cooled the furnace around the faithful three.
 And tamed the Chaldean Lions, hath set His handmaid free!

Last night I saw the sunset melt through my prison bars,
 Last night across my damp earth floor fell the pale gleam of stars:
 In the coldness and the darkness all through the long night time,
 My grated casement whitened with Autumn's early rime.

Alone, in that dark sorrow, hour after hour crept by;
 Star after star looked palely in and sank adown the sky:
 No sound amid night's stillness, save that which seemed to be
 The dull and heavy beating of the pulses of the sea;

All night I sat unsleeping, for I knew that on the morrow
 The ruler and the cruel priest would mock me in my sorrow,
 Dragged to their place of market, and bargained for and sold.
 Like a lamb before the shambles, like a heifer from the fold!

Oh, the weakness of the flesh was there—the shrinking and the shame;

And the low voice of the Tempter like whispers to me came:
 "Why sit'st thou thus forlornly!" the wicked murmur said.
 "Damp walls thy bower of beauty, cold earth thy maiden bed?"

"Where be the smiling faces, and voices soft and sweet,
 Seen in thy father's dwelling, heard in the pleasant street?
 Where be the youths, whose glances the summer Sabbath through

Turned tenderly and timidly unto thy father's pew?"

"Why sit'st thou here, Cassandra?—Bethink thee with what mirth
 Thy happy schoolmates gather around the warm bright hearth;
 How the crimson shadows tremble on foreheads white and fair.
 On eyes of merry girlhood, half hid in golden hair.

Not for thee the hearth-fire brightens, not for thee kind words are spoken,

Not for thee the nuts of Wenham woods by laughing boys are broken.

No first-fruits of the orchard within thy lap are laid,

For thee no flowers of Autumn the youthful hunters braid.

“ Oh! weak, deluded maiden!—by crazy fancies led,
 With wild and raving railers an evil path to tread;
 To leave a wholesome worship, and teachings pure and sound;
 And mate with maniac women, loose-haired and sack-cloth-bound.

“ Mad scoffers of the priesthood, who mock at things divine,
 Who rail against the pulpit, and holy bread and wine;
 Sore from their cart-tail scourgings, and from the pillory lame,
 Rejoicing in their wretchedness, and glorying in their shame.

“ And what a fate awaits thee?—a sadly toiling slave,
 Dragging the slowly lengthening chain of bondage to the grave!
 Think of thy woman’s nature, subdued in hopeless thrall,
 The easy prey of any, the scoff and scorn of all.”

Oh!—ever as the Tempter spoke, and feeble Nature’s fears
 Wrung drop by drop the scalding flow of unavailing tears,
 I wrestled down the evil thoughts, and strove in silent prayer,
 To feel, oh, Helper of the weak!—that thou indeed wert there!

I thought of Paul and Silas, within Philippi’s cell,
 And how from Peter’s sleeping limbs the prison shackles fell,
 Till I seemed to hear the trailing of an angel’s robe of white,
 And to feel a blessed presence invisible to sight.

Bless the Lord for all His mercies! for the peace and love I felt,
 Like dew of Hermon’s holy hill, upon my spirit melt;
 When, “ Get behind me, Satan!” was the language of my heart,
 And I felt the Evil Tempter with all his doubts depart.

Slow broke the gray cold morning; again the sunshine fell,
 Flecked with the shade of bar and grate within my lonely cell;
 The hoar frost melted on the wall, and upward from the street
 Came careless laugh and idle word, and tread of passing feet.

At length the heavy bolts fell back, my door was open cast,
 And slowly at the sheriff’s side, up the long street I passed;
 I heard the murmur round me, and felt, but dared not see
 How, from every door and window, the people gazed on me.

And doubt and fear fell on me, shame burned upon my cheek,
 Swam earth and sky around me, my trembling limbs grew weak:
 “ Oh, Lord! support thy handmaid; and from her soul cast out
 The fear of man, which brings a snare—the weakness and the doubt.”

Then the dreary shadows scattered like a cloud in morning's breeze.

And a low deep voice within me seemed to whisper words like these :

“ Though thy earth be as the iron, and thy heaven a brazen wall, Trust still His loving kindness whose power is over all.”

We paused at length, where at my feet the sun-lit waters broke
On glaring reach of shining beach, and shingly wall of rock ;
The merchant-ships lay idly there, in hard clear lines on high,
Tracing with rope and slender spar their net-work on the sky.

And there were ancient citizens, cloak-wrapt and grave and cold,
And grim and stout sea-captains with faces bronzed and old,
And on his horse, with Rawson, his cruel clerk at hand,
Sat dark and haughty Endicott, the ruler of the land.

And poisoning with his evil words the ruler's ready ear,
The priest leaned o'er his saddle, with laugh and scoff and jeer :
It stirred my soul, and from my lips the seal of silence broke,
As if through woman's weakness a warning spirit spoke.

I cried, “ The Lord rebuke thee, thou smiter of the meek,
Thou robber of the righteous, thou trampler of the weak !
Go light the dark, cold hearth-stone — go turn the prison lock
Of the poor hearts thou hast hunted, thou wolf amid the flock !”

Dark lowered the brows of Endicott, and with a deeper red
O'er Rawson's wine-empurpled cheek the flush of anger spread :
“ Good people,” quoth the white-lipped priest, “ heed not her words so wild.

Her master speaks within her—the devil owns his child !

But gray heads shook, and young brows knit, the while the sheriff read

That law the wicked rulers against the poor have made,
Who to their house of Rimmon the idol priesthood bring
No bended knee of worship nor gainful offering.

Then to the stout sea-captains the sheriff turning said :
“ Which of ye, worthy seamen, will take this Quaker maid ?
In the Isle of fair Barbadoes, or on Virginia's shore,

-You may hold her at a higher price than Indian girl or Moor.”

Grim and silent stood the captains; and when again he cried,
 Speak out my worthy seamen!"—no voice, no sign replied;
 But I felt a hard hand press my own, and kind words met my ear:
 "God bless thee and preserve thee, my gentle girl and dear!"

A weight seemed lifted from my heart,—a pitying friend was nigh,

I felt it in his hard, rough hand, I saw it in his eye;
 And when again the sheriff spoke, that voice, so kind to me,
 Growled back its stormy answer like the roaring of the sea:

"Pile my ship with bars of silver—pack with coins of Spanish gold

From keel-piece up to deck-plank, the roomage of her hold,
 By the living God who made me!—I would sooner in your bay Sink ship and crew and cargo, than bear this child away!"

"Well answered, worthy captain, shame on their cruel laws!"
 Ran through the crowds in murmurs loud the people's just applause.

"Like the herdsman of Tekoa, in Israel of old, Shall we see the poor and righteous again for silver sold?"

I looked on haughty Endicott; with weapon half way drawn.
 Swept round the throng his lion glare of bitter hate and scorn;
 Fiercely he drew his bridle rein, and turned in silence back,
 And sneering priest and baffled clerk rode murmuring in his track.

Hard after them the sheriff looked, in bitterness of soul;
 Thrice smote his staff upon the ground, and crushed his parchment roll.

"Good friends," he said, "since both have fled, the ruler and the priest,

Judge ye, if from their further work I be not well released."

Loud was the cheer which, full and clear, swept round the silent bay,

As, with kind words and kinder looks, he bade me go my way;
 For He who turns the courses of the streamlet of the glen,
 And the river of great waters, had turned the hearts of men.

Oh, at that hour the very earth seemed changed beneath my eye.
 A holier wonder round me rose the blue walls of the sky,
 A lovelier light on rock and hill, and stream and woodland lay.
 And softer lapsed on sunnier sands the waters of the bay.

Thanksgiving to the Lord of life!— to Him, all praises be,
Who from the hands of evil men hath set His handmaid free;
All praise to Him before whose power the mighty are afraid,
Who takes the crafty in the snare, which for the poor is laid!

Sing, oh, my soul, rejoicingly, on evening's twilight calm
Uplift the loud thanksgiving — pour forth the grateful psalm;
Let all dear hearts with me rejoice, as did the saints of old,
When of the Lord's good angel the rescued Peter told.

And weep and howl, ye evil priests and mighty men of wrong,
The Lord shall smite the proud and lay His hand upon the strong.
Wo to the wicked rulers in His avenging hour!
Wo to the wolves who seek the flocks to raven and devour;

But let the humble ones arise,— the poor in heart be glad,
And let the mourning ones again with robes of praise be clad.
For he who cooled the furnace, and smoothed the stormy wave,
And tamed the Chaldean lions, is mighty still to save!

SOLOMON SOUTHWICK.

July 20, 1774. The Legislature of Rhode Island met oftener, and each session brought up questions of great moment. Solomon Southwick of Newport had just published "Lord Somer's judgment of whole Kingdoms and Nations concerning the Rights, Powers and Prerogatives of Kings, and the Rights, Privileges and properties of the people," and as the legislators of R. I. read this inculcation of resisting evil and destructive Princes, they felt their own resolution strengthened and saw the path of duty plainer to their eyes. All began to feel that "the time was near approaching when they must gird on their Swords and ride forth to meet their Enemies."*—G. W. Green's Life of Gen. Nathaniel Green, p. 74.

SOLOMON SOUTHWICK,

IN 1783 represented to the assembly of Rhode Island that during the war, owing to the active part he took early in the war, he was compelled to leave the Island with his family and wandered for (14) fourteen months, during which time he was put to a cost of

* Forces Archives, published in Connecticut.

($5.000) five thousand silver dollars. That before the war he had bought two houses of Samuel Marryott, which were pulled down by the enemy. At this time he had half paid for the houses and could have paid the balance at any time in paper money, but he could not in conscience do this, as he thought to do so would be wrong. That he was then confined in a single chamber a prisoner on an obligation he gave Marryott for ($170) one hundred and seventy dollars. That at this time he was greatly distressed with a nervous disorder, and had been for several months, and there was no possibility of his recovery, but with the aid of good air and free exercise. That he has all the books and papers as Deputy Commissary General of this department for upwards of four years. He prayed that he might be set at liberty as it was absolutely impossible for him to pay his debts. He asked for two months to compound with his creditors. The assembly gave him the liberty of his house and the back yard.

In October 1784, Solomon Southwick represented to the assembly that he had been a prisoner for debt for more than (13) thirteen months; that he had lost several thousand dollars by the war and could not collect one-tenth part of the debts due him; that his two houses had been destroyed by the enemy; that he had made proposals to his creditors which most of them were willing to accept; but his committing creditor would not come to any terms; wherefore he prayed to be liberated. Prayer granted, liberated from prison, and no action was to be commenced against him for five years.—J. M. K. Southwick, per Hon. William P. Sheffield, about Solomon the Printer at Newport.

From NEWPORT ILLUSTRATED, by George O. Mason.

THE first newspaper published in Newport was issued in 1732 by James Franklin, elder brother of Dr. Benj. Franklin. It was a small sheet, the size of ordinary letter paper, and was printed on a press brought from Boston, which was imported by James Franklin, and was long standing in the office of the Newport Mercury.

On the 14th of Feb. 1734-35, James Franklin died, aged 38, after a long indisposition. The printing office he left to his son James, then a child. On the 12th of June, 1758, the son issued the first number of the Newport Mercury. He was assisted in the management of it by his mother, Ann Franklin, and in a few years, James having left Newport for some cause never made known, and never to return, her imprint alone appeared on the paper. The daughter of Mrs. Franklin having married one Samuel Hall, the Mercury was made over to him, and subsequently it was transferred to Solomon Southwick, who published it until December 1776, when it was discontinued for a time. Southwick, fearing the British, who were preparing to land on the Island, would destroy the property, to preserve his press and types, then standing in the office on Queen Street, near the middle of the parade ground, from falling into their hands, they were removed to the rear of the old building on Broad Street, known as the Kilburn house, where they were buried in the garden. The fact that the property was so secreted was made known to the Commander of the British troops, who caused it to be removed to the building known as the Vaughan house, making the north corner of parade and Thames Street, where in the chambers one John Howe, who was known as printer to his Majesty, regularly issued the Rhode Island Gazette during 1777, 1778 and 1779, copies of which papers can now be seen at the Redwood Library at Newport. After the war the property was purchased by Mr. Henry Barber, and the Mercury was again issued January 1, 1780. It continued in the possession of the Barber family for over seventy years, having been owned by father, son and grandson in succession. It is now the property of Messrs. Coggeshall and Pratt in 1879.

From "HISTORY OF PRINTING IN AMERICA,
With a Biography of Printers, and Account of Newspapers." By Isaiah Thomas.

SOLOMON SOUTHWICK was born in Newport R. I., but was not brought up to the business of printing. He was the son of a fisherman, and when a lad assisted his father in selling fish in the market-place. The attention he paid to that employment, the comeliness of his person, and the evidence he gave of a sprightly genius, attracted the notice of the worthy Henry Collins, who at that time was said to be the most wealthy citizen in Newport, one of the first mercantile characters in New England and greatly distinguished in the Colony of Rhode Island for philanthropy and benevolence. Mr. Collins took a number of illiterate boys whose parents were poor, under his patronage, and gave each an education suited to his capacity, several of whom became distinguished in the learned professions. Among the objects of his care and liberality was young Southwick, who was placed at the Academy at Philadelphia and there provided for till he had completed his studies. Mr. Collins then established him as a merchant with a partner by the name of Clarke. Southwick and Clarke did business on an extensive scale; they built several vessels and were engaged in trade to London and elsewhere: but eventually they became bankrupts and their partnership was dissolved. After this misfortune Southwick married a daughter of Col. John Gardner, who for several years had been Governor of the Colony, and by this marriage he became possessed of a handsome estate. About this time Samuel Hall, who had a desire to leave Newport for Salem, offered his printing establishment for sale. Southwick became the purchaser in March, 1768, and succeeded to the business of Hall. He continued the publication of the Newport Mercury, and made some attempts at book printing. He published for his own sale several small volumes, but the turbulence of the times checked his progress in this branch of printing. Southwick discovered a sincere and warm attachment to the interest of the country. He was a firm Whig and sensible and spirited writer, and in other respects was qualified to be the editor of a newspaper and the conductor of a press in times of revolutionary commotion.

The severity of the British Government to the province of Massachusetts particularly, was manifested by several acts of Parliament which were passed in 1774. By one of these acts the people were deprived of many of their chartered rights and privileges: by another the port of Boston was shut and the transaction of every kind of commercial business on the waters of this harbor was interdicted. These arbitrary edicts aroused the indignation of the people in all the colonies. They loudly expressed their resentment in various ways and the press became the organ through which their sentiments were energetically announced. Southwick was among the number of printers who were not backward to blow the trumpet in our Zion and to sound an alarm in the Holy Mountain of our liberties. He wrote and printed an address to the people of Rhode Island which was headed with the motto

“Join or die.” This motto had appeared in several of the newspapers, as will be mentioned hereafter. In this appeal Boston was represented as in a state of seige, which was actually true, for the harbor was completely blockaded by ships of war, and a large number of troops were quartered in the town. It is also further stated that these measures of the British government were a direct and hostile invasion of all the Colonies. The address was concluded by observing that the Generals of Despotism are drawing the lines of circumvallation around our bulwarks of Liberty, and nothing but unity, resolution and perseverance can save ourselves and posterity from what is worse than death, Slavery. Southwick, by his publications and exertions in the cause of the country became very obnoxious to those who were of the opposite party: and he with other zealous Whigs were marked as objects of punishment. When the British fleet and army took possession of Newport in 1776, he barely eluded the threatened evil. As soon as a part of the army had landed, a detachment of both horse and foot were sent in all parts of the town to arrest the patriots who were endeavoring to effect an escape. Southwick, his wife with a child in her arms, and some other persons had got on board of an open boat and were just putting off from the shore into a very rough sea occasioned by a high wind, when a party of soldiers who were in pursuit of them came in sight. Southwick’s wife had a brother who was a Royalist, and as such was known to the British officers, who however wished to secure the retreat of his sister and her husband. Aware of their danger, this brother put himself in the way of their pursuers and for a few moments arrested their attention by giving them information of the several parts of the town whence the proscribed Whigs would probably attempt to make their retreat, etc. This friendly interference gave Southwick and his friends time to get a few rods from the shore before the party arrived at the spot they had just quitted; the boat was yet within reach of their shot: the soldiers fired at them but without effect, the passengers fortunately received no injury and were soon wafted to a place of safety.* Mr. Southwick was at this time a member of the General Assembly of Rhode Island; he owned two houses in Newport, which with other property, were destroyed. He sought an asylum in Attleborough, on the frontier of Massachusetts and there erected a press, but being soon after appointed Commissary General of issues for the state of Rhode Island, he removed to Providence. As soon as the British troops evacuated Newport he returned to that town and resumed the publication of his paper which he continued until 1787, when by ill health and embarrassed circumstances he was obliged to relinquish business and to place the Mercury in other hands.

In a historical sketch of the Mercury published in that paper after it had completed a century of its existence, June 12, 1858, it is asserted that Southwick did not return to resume his paper, but that Henry Barber revived its publication in 1780. As yet no copies of the Mercury have been found that were published from 1776 to 1780, when Barber's name appears, but it is mentioned by Mr. Thomas in the second volume of his work that Southwick resumed its publication at Attleborough, Mass. Copies of the Mercury are preserved in the library of the American Antiquarian Society at Worcester, which show that Southwick was associated with Barber in May, 1785; that he was printing it alone in 1787, and that Barber was again printing it in his own name in 1788. Southwick's monument is still seen in the cemetery at Newport; a copy of the inscription has been furnished by Mr. Fred A. Pratt, the present editor of the Mercury, as follows:

* Mr. Southwick with his wife and eldest son Solomon, escaped, but a younger child and its nurse were captured. (M.)

“In memory of (Solomon Southwick, Esq.) a gentleman of liberal education and expansive mind, for many years editor and proprietor of the Newport Mercury and Commissary General for the state of R. I., in the revolutionary war. He died Dec. 23, 1797, in the 66th year of his age.

“Just, generous, benevolent and sincere
Was he whose hallowed dust lies here;
If e'er a partial prayer he breathed to heaven,
That prayer was for his Country's Glory given.”

The house which Mr. Southwick occupied on his return to Newport with his printing office is that in which the Newport Bank is now located. Children of his son Henry Collins, reside in Albany, N. Y. and preserve volumes of the Mercury and other mementoes of their ancestor, among which is a diploma from the college and academy of Philadelphia for proficiency in philosophy and mathematics, 1757, conferring upon him the degree of B. A. (M.)

Southwick's pecuniary concerns were greatly impaired by the rapid depreciation of the paper currency before the establishment of peace. He, like many others, cherished a belief that the nominal sum specified in the bills would eventually be made good in specie. The impracticability of the thing was not considered, even when one hundred dollars would not buy one dollar in silver. The delusion was not discovered by some until they found themselves involved in ruin. The government of the Union was indebted to Southwick both for his services and for money loaned. This debt, like others of its kind, was liquidated by notes known as final settlement. In the course of some months after they were issued, they were sold in the market for one-eighth of their nominal value. To this depreciated state was national paper reduced before the assumption of the public debt by the new government, and when it was at that state Southwick was compelled to sell his final settlement notes for the support of himself and family. He was engaged in the cause of his country in the times of her adversity and danger, but he had no portion of the benefits resulting from her prosperity. Assailed by poverty and borne down by infirmity, he lived in obscurity from the year 1788 to the time of his death, and being unable to provide for his children, he left them to make their own way in the world. He lost his wife, who was a most excellent woman, in 1783, and he died himself Dec. 23, 1797, aged 66 years.

NEWPORT PRINTERS.

Mr. Geo. C. Mason, in an article in the New York Evening Post, under this caption, describes the early printers of Newport and gives some account of their work. He says :

Among the early printers were those of Rhode Island. There was a press in Newport in 1729. This was the fourth press set up in America, and James Franklin was the founder. He had been engaged in Boston in printing the New England Courant, a newspaper that strongly opposed the introduction of inoculation for smallpox, and did many other things that annoyed its readers. In 1727 the journal was suppressed, and soon after that event Franklin removed to Newport. Here he brought out as early as 1729, a reprint of "Barclay's Apology for the True Christian Divinity, as the same is set forth and Preached by the People, called in scorn Quakers." This was a large quarto volume, originally written in Latin and English, and then "translated into High Dutch, Low Dutch and French, for the edification of Strangers."

In 1730 Franklin printed the charter granted by King Charles II. to the colony of Rhode Island, and in September, 1733, he issued the first number of a small sheet called the Rhode Island Gazette, which had but a short life, for it was discontinued on the 24th of the following May.

The Acts and Laws of the Colony were printed by Franklin until the time of his death, in 1734; and after his death, his widow, who had brought up her sons and daughters as printers, continued the business.

There is ample evidence that Mrs. Franklin was an energetic woman, and her imprint, "The Widow Franklin," may be found on many of the publications of that day. During and after the year 1745 the name of James Franklin often appeared with that of his mother, and in 1758 he began the publication of the Newport Mercury, a newspaper that has come down to the present day. One of the works that came from his press was: "The Strange and Wonderful Predictions of Mr. Christopher Love, Minister of the Gospel at Laurence-Jury; who was Beheaded at Tower Hill, in the time of Oliver Cromwell's government in England; giving an account of Babylon's fall; or the Destruction of Popery, and in the glorious Event a general Reformation all over the world."

Love's history was a singular one. He was opposed to King Charles, and yet was beheaded for plotting against Cromwell. He has been spoken of, on the one hand, as an "angelical and holy writer," and on the other, as "guilty of as much treason as the pulpit could contain."

In 1762 James Franklin died, and the business was carried on by his mother, "the Widow Franklin," who took for a partner Samuel Hall, a printer then working in Newport. The connection was a short one, for Mrs. Franklin died the following year. Hall continued to print in Newport, and many of the almanacs of that day bear his imprint. He sold out to Solomon Southwick, who became one of the most energetic of the early New-England printers. He was a poor boy, who had been taken up and aided by Henry Collins, a prominent merchant, in obtaining some education, and was engaged in trade when the Mercury office was offered for sale in 1768. How his attention was brought to it is not known, but he bought it and at once entered upon the duties of the office, all of which were new and strange to him. At the outset he espoused the cause of liberty, and on every occasion his views were expressed openly and clearly. As early as December 18, 1769, he had for the motto of his journal: "Undaunted by TYRANTS—we'll DIE or be FREE!" and this he followed up with sturdy blows.

But Southwick did not devote himself exclusively to the Mercury, for he brought out many pamphlets and small volumes that are now sought after by collectors. Among others, "Church's Entertaining History of King Philip's War," Nathaniel Morton's "New England Memorial," "The Tryal of a False Prophet," and also a sermon preached in Newport by the "Venerable Hocham, the learned Rabbi Haign Isaac Kari-gal, of the city of Hebron, near Jerusalem." "A Discourse on Saving Knowledge," delivered at the installation of the Rev. Samuel Hopkins, by Dr. Styles, was printed by Southwick in 1770, on a press and on paper made in this colony, and some of the types were made in Connecticut. But he gave most of his time to publications that had a bearing on the dispute between England and the colonies. In 1774, he issued a reprint of "The Whole of the Celebrated Speech of the Rev. Jonathan Shipley, Lord Bishop of Asaph, on the Bill for Altering the Charter of the Massachusetts Bay," which was prefaced with the remark, "It is allowed to be one of the best pieces wrote on the present dispute between North America and Great Britain." Of Shipley it was said at the time of his death: "His talents were acknowledged on all sides, and whichever party triumphed in his assistance, the other wished for his support."

During the same year Southwick printed from the Boston edition "An Oration delivered March 5th, 1774, at the Request of the Inhabitants of the Town of Boston, to commemorate the Bloody Tragedy on the 5th of March, by the Honorable John Hancock, Esq."

The time and the circumstances attending the delivery of that oration I need not refer to; Southwick gave his readers all the particulars that had reached him, and in the same paper, in the "poet's corner," he printed some verses growing out of the affair, with the title: "A SONG FOR THE FIFTH OF MARCH. Tune, 'Once the Gods of the Greeks,' &c." The verses closed with these lines:

"A ray of bright Glory now Beams from afar,
Blest dawn of AN EMPIRE to rise:
The American ensign now Sparkles a star,
Which shall Shortly flame wide thro' the Skies.

"Strong knit is the Band which unites the blessed Land,
No Dæmon the Union shall Sever:
Here's a glass to fair Freedom, come give us your hand—
May the orator flourish forever!"

While thus engaged, Southwick turned aside for a moment to give some aid to the anti-slavery movement, which was then beginning to take shape. Among other papers under this head, he printed an address signed by Drs. Stiles and Hopkins, concerning the sending of black freemen to the coast of Africa. But when the British approached Newport and showed a disposition to land, he beat a hasty retreat, for the loyalists were anxious that he should fall into the hands of the enemy, and were quite ready to turn him over the moment an opportunity offered. The Mercury was discontinued December 2, 1776, and six days later the British army, under General Clinton, took possession of the southern part of the island.

While here they published a newspaper called the Newport Gazette, of which copies have been preserved. The French, in turn, had a press here, and in 1780 they issued an almanac from the office of the Gazette Francaise, which is now very rare. It contains, with other matters, the names of all the French officers, army and navy, and the vessels or regiments to which they belonged.

The British evacuated Newport October 25, 1779, and on the 5th of January, 1780, the first number of the reissue of the Mercury appeared. It had then passed into the hands of Henry Barber. Southwick, after his return, was associated with Barber in the management of the Mercury. In 1787 he was again sole proprietor of the journal, but shortly after that it passed back into the hands of Barber, and his descendants continued to be its publishers until 1851, when the last publisher of the name died.

After the war Peter Edes, who at one time printed the Boston Gazette and County Journal, established the Newport Herald to oppose the paper money party, but it ruined him, and when he died in 1803 he was "as poor as a church mouse." Oliver Farnsworth was another unsuccessful printer. He started a newspaper in Newport in 1799 and another in 1800. Both journals "died young." While printing the later one he brought out a small volume, the "Memory of Washington," a collection of eulogies and orations, intended to meet a demand of the moment, but of no lasting value. He also did a little business at trunk making, and probably in that way worked up some of his unsold publications.

The people were too poor after the war to sustain the printer, and only occasionally an oration, or a sermon of more than ordinary interest, found its way into print. In 1810 Rousmaniere & Barber, who were then publishing the Newport Mercury, brought out the first American edition of "Oberon." Weiland was then greatly admired. Wiesbeck had sounded his praise, the Monthly Review dwelt at length on his merits, and Napoleon had helped to make him popular by the notice he took of him in the salon of the Duchess of Saxe-Weimar, all of which, no doubt, had great weight with the American publishers. The preface, giving a biographical sketch of the author, was written by William Hunter, then a young lawyer, who, in maturer years, was made Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States to Brazil. During the next year the same publishers put to press "Paley's Works," in five volumes, with a memoir by G. W. Meadley, who, two years later, was the author of a memoir of Algernon Sidney, of whom Coleridge was led to say, "What a gentleman he was!"

I have thus briefly sketched what the press has done in this part of Rhode Island. No work of any great importance was ever printed here, but in the early history of the colony its printers were frequently employed by writers and publishers in other places. A long list of such works as "Sermons by Samuel Fothergill" and "A Dialogue from the pen of Wesley" might be mentioned. The only American reprint of the "Fables of Pilpay," is that of 1784, printed in Newport by Solomon Southwick.—Newport Daily News, Oct, 29, 1880.

DANIEL SOUTHWICK, son of Lawrence and Tamson Buffum, was born at Salem, Mass., in 1705. He learned the tanning business of his brother and moved from Salem to Mendon (now Uxbridge), Mass., in 1742, as per testimonial and records of the Smithfield monthly meeting of Friends. He bought 200 acres of land of Benjamin Taft, of Mendon, or Uxbridge, and started a tan-yard. He became a distinguished preacher of the Society of Friends, and after his death they passed as a tribute for his good work, a testimonial setting forth his great ability as a preacher and his excellence as a man. Said testimonial was signed by Moses Brown,* David Buffum, Daniel Aldrich and eleven others of the prominent members of the Society of Friends of the Smithfield monthly meeting. Daniel expired Nov. 19, 1776; the above memorial was signed Dec. 26, 1776.

The tan-vats which Daniel used at Mendon are now visible (in 1880); i. e., the ground shows deep hollow places where the vats were. The farm which Daniel bought is now owned by James Comstock Southwick, and has been owned by some Southwick ever since Daniel's death.

Testimony of the Monthly meeting held at Smithfield, in New England, Dec. 26, 1776, Concerning Daniel Southwick, late of Mendon, deceased:

Forasmuch as it appears probable to us that some account of this, our valued friend, may be beneficial if committed to record as an encouragement to virtue, the following is preserved. He was born at Salem in Massachusetts in the year 1705, and descended of the family of Southwicks mentioned in Sewels and Bishops History. His father dying while he was young, he was deprived of his parental instructor, an advantage too lightly prized by many youth, to their own loss. He was educated amongst Friends, and when come to man's estate was religiously inclined, forsaking youthful follies. In this course he passed through experience and discouragements till at times ready to sink. But a language passing through his mind in a season of this kind, "That he who had begun a good work was able to carry it on," so strengthened him that from thence he took courage, and embracing the cross, perservered in the way he saw to be that of duty, and not long afterwards was concerned to appear in the ministry in our meetings to the satisfaction of his friends.

He moved from Salem to settle amongst us in the year 1742, subsequent to which we were favored with his company most of the time to the period of his death, and we can say of him according to our view, that pride, covetousness, and anger had as little room in him as in any of our acquaintance. In his public testimonies he was much concerned to shew the nature and value of love and the pernicious consequences of hatred, ill will, and contention, and also to maintain the universality of the light of Christ, clearly proving this by the testimony of the scriptures.

He was very able to point out and illustrate how opposite war and bloodshed are to the precepts of the Gospel, which teach to beat swords into plow-shares and spears into pruning-hooks, and to learn war no more. And he was sorely affected in viewing the lamentable state of the English nation at this time. He was constant in the attendance of our religious meetings and exemplary in his deportment therein. He was peaceable and a peace-maker in the neighborhood where he dwelt, and as he lived so he died, evincing as death drew nigh, his strong love for his friends and desires for their preservation, and his example being worthy of imitation, we hope his concern may have increasing weight with each of us to excite watchfulness and care, in order for our preservation in the truth.

His understanding remained sound till near his last, and he uttered during his sickness many instructive and comfortable expressions, observing that "it much affected him to see persons advanced in life, with families, trampling upon the testimonies of truth." At another time, after lying silently for some time in great pain, he cried out "I didn't know that I could bear this had it not been that our Master bore it before me, but now I find I can bear this and more too, patiently," or words to that effect. The evening before his death he observed, "I think the pains of death are upon me and that I shall not see the light of another day. The pain of body that I endure is very great, but the peace of mind overbalance all, for my mind is in perfect peace." His last sickness continued about three months, and during that time he underwent much bodily pain, which he bore with exemplary fortitude unto the end. He expired on the 19th of Nov. 1776, in good unity with his brethren, and has we believe, arrived "where the wicked cease from troubling, and where the weary are at rest," and on the 20th of Nov. 1776, his remains were interred in his own grounds, attended by a large concourse of friends and others.

Signed in and on behalf of the meeting aforesaid by BENJAMIN ARNOLD, MOSES BROWN, DAVID BUFFUM, DANIEL ALDRICH, and eleven other Friends.

Josiah⁵, went to Danby, Vt., when he was 24 years of age (1801). Josiah was a Quaker, and very much esteemed by all who knew him, for his love of peace, and good will towards all. His industry and thrift and cheerful disposition made him a pleasant companion for old and young; his memory was good and eye sight until his death.—History of Danby Vt., published in 1874.

JOSIAH SOUTHWICK, a native of Massachusetts, was born in 1777. He came to Danby when he was 24 years of age (1801), married Mary Baker, of Granville, N. Y., and in 1801 settled on the farm where he now lives. He is the son of Lawrence Southwick, a native of Salem, Mass., and was one of a family of twenty children, he being the nineteenth child. His grandmother, on his mother's side, was the daughter of John Franklin, a printer of Newport, R. I., who was a brother to Benjamin Franklin, the celebrated philosopher. Mr. Southwick is at present (1870) the oldest inhabitant of the town, being 93 years of age. He is a hale, robust, healthy old man ; his mental and physical powers being unimpaired. He can read common print without spectacles, and his memory at this advanced age is good. Nearly the whole world of mankind living at the time he was born have died. He has been a hard laboring, industrious farmer, a man of good morals and excellent habits. He is a member of the Quaker Society, a peaceable, quiet citizen and a good neighbor. Mr. Southwick is a Republican by principle and although never having been an active politician, he has attended every Presidential election since his residence here. We hope many years of life and vigor may yet be by a kind Providence meted out to him. He is one of the old landmarks and the only remaining link which connects us with the revolutionary times. Many changes have taken place, and many important events have transpired in his day. Two generations have passed away since his settlement here, and there are less than a dozen living here now who were here at the time of his settlement. He is a man of cheerful disposition and of wit and humor, possessing a large fund of anecdotes, and is a genial companion. Many of his stories, although relating to events of seventy-five or eighty years ago, are still told with all the ardor of youth. Mr. Southwick is a man of domestic habits and a promoter of peace. He has been twice married. His last wife's name was Rachael Brown, with whom he now lives. He has but two children, William, and Hannah who married Joseph Fletcher. They live upon the homestead and have one daughter, May R.—Records of Town of Danby, Vt.

BIOGRAPHY OF SOLOMON SOUTHWICK.

By S. S. Randall, (with photograph, in "Annals of Albany," Vol. V. Published by Munsell, Albany.)

THE citizens of Albany are here presented with the speaking lineaments of a countenance long familiar to many of them; of a man whose pride and boast it was to number himself among them; who for a long series of years occupied a commanding position in the political councils of the state and whose career affords a signal practical illustration of what may be accomplished, even under the pressure of the most discouraging obstacles, by active perseverance, untiring labor and sound and fixed moral principles. Left at the age of twelve years a destitute orphan, without friends, without resources of any kind, other than such as nature had bestowed upon him in the inappreciable blessings of a sound and vigorous constitution—he commenced the work of self-education in the stern school of adversity, and progressed step by step with an unfaltering determination and an unyielding energy, until he found himself in the highest walks of honorable usefulness, guiding the destinies of the state, wielding the truncheon of influence, power and wealth, dispensing patronage and diffusing knowledge. The history of such a man is worthy of the most careful study, developing as it does, the elements of self-culture, and affording that encouragement to the indigent and friendless which may enable them to breast the storms of life and work out its manifold problems with honor and success.

Solomon Southwick was born at Newport, R. I., on the 25th of December, 1773. His father was one of the earliest and most efficient champions in that gallant struggle for the rights of the colonists, which eventuated in the war of the revolution. As the editor of the Newport Mercury he fearlessly and powerfully asserted and maintained those republican doctrines which pervaded the hearts of the patriots of that day and materially aided in hastening the eventful crisis which was destined to give birth to a free and independent nation. His well-known sentiments and effective exertions in the cause of liberty rendered him peculiarly obnoxious to the emissaries of the British Government; and placed under the vindictive ban of an unscrupulous and irritated tyranny, he became one of the earliest victims of oppression and power. From a condition of competency and even affluence, arising from his connection with some of the best and wealthiest families of the province, and by his own industry and talents, he was speedily reduced to utter destitution and penury. Hunted down by the myrmidons of despotism, he was driven from his home and compelled to seek elsewhere a precarious shelter from the vengeance of an exasperated foe. His wife soon fell a victim to anxiety, care and physical and mental sufferings, and he survived her loss but a short time, leaving five children dependent upon the world's cold charity for the means of subsistence.

The subject of this sketch commenced his career, while yet a mere boy, as cook to a fishing company bound for Cape Cod; and after enduring for several months the innumerable hardships and privations incident to such a station, he returned to Newport and apprenticed himself to a baker in his native town. Not long afterwards abandoning this employment, he went on board a coasting vessel in the capacity of a common sailor, where he remained until he attained his eighteenth year, when he obtained a situation as apprentice in a printing establishment in the city of New York. From thence he was transferred as a journeyman to the office of the Albany Register in this city, then conducted by his brother-in-law, John Barber, printer to the state; and soon after became a partner in that establishment. On the death of Mr. Barber in 1808, he succeeded to his interest in the paper; and in this capacity, his talents, intrepidity and energy soon placed him at the head of the Democratic party, of which the Register was organ and champion, and enabled him for a long time to exercise an almost unlimited influence upon the political destinies of the state. He continued in charge of the Register for a period of nearly thirty years, during which time he successively held the stations of Clerk of the House of Assembly, Clerk of the Senate, Sheriff of the county of Albany, Manager of the State Literature Lottery, State Printer, Regent of the University and Postmaster of the city of Albany.

After the discontinuance of the Register, he established and conducted for several years an agricultural paper under the title of the Plough Boy, first under the anonymous designation of "Henry Homespun, Jr.," and subsequently in his own name. At about the same period, he also became the editor of The Christian Visitant, a periodical devoted to the interests of religion and morality, and to the refutation of infidel principles. Subsequently he assumed the editorial charge of the National Democrat, during which period he presented himself to the electors of the state as a candidate for governor in opposition to the regularly nominated candidate of the Democratic party, the Hon. Joseph C. Yates. During the prevalence of the anti-masonic excitement, he established and for several years conducted the National Observer, the prominent organ of anti-masonry; and was soon afterwards nominated as the candidate of that party for the chief magistracy, in opposition to Mr. Van Buren and the Hon. Smith Thompson, the candidates respectively of the friends of Gen. Jackson and Mr. Adams. Failing of success however, and disgusted with the manifold vexations of political strife, he withdrew from the turbulent arena of public life and sought in the congenial atmosphere of the domestic and social circle that happiness and peace of mind which he had failed to experience in the restless career of personal and political ambition.

His long connection with the party interests of the day having terminated, the remainder of his life was devoted to study and contemplation, to the welcome enjoyments of the family fireside, and to the dissemination of religious, moral and intellectual truth. The morning of his life was overshadowed with heavy and threatening clouds; his noonday sun shone with a brilliant, perhaps a too brilliant and hurtful splendor;

but its evening declination was the steady tempered, and grateful recollection of a mellowed and softened light. It is to this period that we must chiefly refer those great exertions in the great field of moral and intellectual education, to which we are indebted for the most conclusive proofs of the vigor, depth, compass and soundness of his mind, as well as the comprehensive benevolence and general philanthropy for which he was so eminently distinguished. From the years 1831 to 1837 he delivered in most of the principal towns of the state a course of lectures on the Bible, on temperance, and on self-education, which were universally admired and highly appreciated. He also published during this period the "Letters of a Layman," under the signature of "Sherlock," addressed to Thomas Hertell, Esq., of New York, chiefly on the subject of that philosophical infidelity originating with the French Revolution and which had taken deep root, particularly in the large cities and more populous places of our own country. This publication was followed by "Five Letters to Young Men, by an Old Man of Sixty," designed to warn the rising generation against the many seductive allurements and criminalities which infest our cities and larger towns. For the last two years of his life he conducted the editorial department of the Family Newspaper, published by his son Alfred Southwick in this city,—a weekly journal devoted to literary and miscellaneous topics,—and devoted his leisure hours to a variety of literary efforts upon topics of general and local interest, theological, political, moral, and miscellaneous, which it was his intention at a future period to revise and prepare for the press. But it was otherwise decreed by the all-wise dispenser of human events. Suddenly and without any previous warning, he was arrested by the hand of death, in the midst of his usefulness, and in the full maturity of his intellectual powers. On the 18th day of November, 1839, while returning, in company with Mrs. Southwick, from a social visit at the house of a valued friend, he was attacked by an affection of the heart, which in about fifteen minutes terminated fatally. His age was sixty-six.

The chief elements which entered into the composition of Mr. Southwick's character were noble and intrinsically great. Reared in the school of adversity, struggling with and heroically surmounting the most formidable obstacles to advancement and success; working out the materials for usefulness, honor, and fame, by his own unaided exertions; and finally triumphing through the force and energy of his character, over all the impediments to his progress—obtaining too that most difficult of all victories, the final and complete subjugation of the selfish propensities to the higher and nobler intellectual and moral nature—his example cannot fail to prove eminently beneficial to the youth of our land. Few men have occupied a larger space in the political history of our state; few have participated more extensively, or for a longer period of time, in the public confidence and regard; and few have experienced more striking vicissitudes of fortune in the busy arena of partisan warfare. The limits to which we are restricted on the present occasion, necessarily compel us to pass over this portion of his public career, and to contemplate him only in that aspect more particularly interesting to the numerous and honorable class of which he was a distinguished member, and for whose benefit his literary efforts were especially designed. Himself emphatically a self-made man—one of nature's noblemen—owing all of knowledge, of mental and moral culture, of success in life, of honor, fame, distinction and usefulness, to his own exertions and perseverance, it was the predominant desire, the master-passion, so to speak, of his mind, to communicate to others and especially to the laboring classes, to the indigent, the obscure, the friendless, and generally to the YOUNG in every condition of life, that knowledge of their powers and faculties which should render them independent of extraneous circumstances and adventitious aid, in the development of their minds, and the advancement of their personal and pecuniary interest. His celebrated address at the opening of the Apprentices' Library in this city—an institution to the establishment of which his exertions materially contributed, and which long remained a proud and invaluable monument of public enterprise and private liberality—is an earnest, impassioned and eloquent appeal in behalf of the "YOUNG MECHANIC," and secured for its author the most gratifying tributes of applause and admiration from the ablest statesmen and most distinguished philanthropists, at home and abroad. Wilberforce commended it as one of the noblest efforts of comprehensive benevolence. Jefferson, Monroe, and the younger Adams and others addressed to him letters expressive of their exalted admiration of his character and efforts in the cause of humanity and education. This address was indeed a masterly production, overflowing with an energy, a pathos and an eloquence which only such a subject, in the hands of such a man, could elicit.

His exertions in aid of indigent and deserving young men, and particularly of mechanics, struggling under the pressure of poverty and embarrassment, were unremitted and most effective. While his ample fortune afforded the means, he assiduously sought out those to whom he might beneficially and advantageously extend the hand of assistance, and neglected no opportunity of advancing and encouraging the industrious and deserving, by substantial testimonials of the interest which he felt in their welfare. Many instances of his timely and efficient, but delicate and unobtrusive interference, at critical moments in the career of the struggling sons of labor, are still gratefully treasured up in honest hearts and will be long remembered. In all his various lectures, addresses, and orations before literary and other societies, at public meetings and on anniversary occasions, the welfare and prosperity of the laboring classes seemed constantly and steadily to have been kept in view; and he availed himself of every opportunity which was presented, to communicate the rich results of his own experience, of his varied and extensive reading and comprehensive and judicious observations. with reference to the cultivation and development of the mind.

A few months previous to his death, he had projected the establishment of a literary and scientific Institute in this city, to be placed under his personal control and supervision, for the purpose of affording the requisite facilities to young men desirous of pursuing the course of self-education which he had himself marked out and followed.

In person Mr. Southwick was somewhat under the middle size, with a countenance beaming with benignity and expressive of an enthusiastic, ardent and sanguine temperament — a countenance indeed indicative of the many and active virtues of his heart. When the writer of this brief and most imperfect sketch, enjoyed the pleasure of his acquaintance and intimacy, age had “silvered over his locks” without in any degree fastening its impress upon the clear contour of his noble brow, or bending his manly form. An insidious disease, the result of sedentary and studious habits, had undermined the citadel of health, and deprived the evening of his days of that uninterrupted and placid enjoyment to which he might otherwise have looked. But his cheerfulness and philosophic amenity never for a moment deserted him; and his domestic altar kindled to the last with the bright glow of diffusive charity and comprehensive benevolence. Peace to his ashes! So long as the kindly virtues of the heart are revered and hallowed, so long will the name of SOLOMON SOUTHWICK be held in remembrance by all who knew his sterling worth and by all who have par-anticipated in the blessings which he aided in securing to the young, by all who shall hereafter avail themselves of those signal advantages in the intellectual and moral culture of their minds, which it was the highest ambition of his life to promote.

Extract from "RANDOM RECOLLECTIONS."

In Annals of Albany; Vol. 10. Published by Munsell, Albany. (This was written by Gorham A. Worth, Esq., who was Cashier of the Mechanics and Farmers' Bank in this city, and afterward President of the City Bank in New York.)

OF the public men of Albany, office holders, politicians and jurists, it may be expected that I should say something. Among the most prominent were Geo. Clinton, John Tayler, Ambrose Spencer, James Kent, Chancellor Lansing, Abraham Van Vechten, John V. Henry, John Woodworth, Thomas Tillotson, Abraham G. Lansing, Elisha Jenkins, Edmond Charles Genet, and last though not least, the editor of the Albany Register, Solomon Southwick. These are names too well known to require any comment. Many of them are identified with the history of the state, and will be chronicled in its pages. I can not in courtesy however, pass over my old friend Southwick, without some other notice than that of a mere casual glance of recognition. Southwick was a man of genius, with all the peculiarities which belong to that temperament; its strength and its weakness, its excellencies and its errors, its delusive dreams and visions, its improvidence and its instability. He had great fertility of mind united with great enthusiasm. This was the source of his eloquence and power. His writings were rather outpourings than compositions. Yet he imbued them with so much life and animation, that he seldom failed to carry his readers with them. His style, though well adapted to the public ear, was redundant in epithet, inflated and declamatory; and his language though often strong and impressive was yet in the main loose and inelegant. He read but little and only from necessity. He referred to books for particular facts rather than for general information.

He was by nature, honest, warm-hearted and generous to a fault, but seemed to have no fixed or settled principles. In ethics as well as in politics he travelled from pole to pole. Yet the kindness of his nature went with him and never forsook him. His heart and his hand were always open; and as he was credulous to excess and even superstitious, he was as a matter of course, swindled by every knave, and duped by every imposter he met with on the road.

He was extremely fluent and even eloquent in conversation. But he had little knowledge of the world, and the predominance of interest or passion, left his judgement too often at fault. He had the finest eye and forehead that ever belonged to mortal man, but every other feature of his face was either indifferent or defective. His countenance was therefore the correct index to the character of his mind, incongruous, mixed and full of contradictions.

The Albany Register, which he so long and ably edited, was pronounced by Judge Spencer to be the "Political Bible of the Western District." A greater compliment was certainly never paid to the conductor of a political journal.

Mr. Southwick held, at different periods, the office of State Printer, Clerk of the House of Assembly, Sheriff of the County of Albany, President of the Mechanics and Farmers' Bank, and Postmaster of the city. Even in the cloudy days of his latter years, when friends, fame and fortune had forsaken him, when every objectionable act of his life was spread upon the record and all his faults and weaknesses blazoned to the public eye; even then he received over "Thirty Thousand Votes" for Governor of the State.

SOLOMON SOUTHWICK went to Albany N. Y. and became editor of the Albany Register, which was begun in 1788 as a Democratic paper, and with which he was connected for a period of nearly thirty years. He was successively Clerk of the House of the Assembly at Albany, Clerk of the Senate, Sheriff of the County, manager of the State Literature Lottery, State Printer, regent of the University, Postmaster of the city, and President of the Farmers and Mechanics' Bank. For a considerable time he was at the head of the Democratic party, wielding almost unlimited influence upon the political destinies of the State. Besides the Register, which he published in his own name from 1808 to 1817, he also published the Christian Visitant, in 1815, and the Plough Boy, an agricultural paper, in 1819. He edited the National Democrat in 1817, the National Observer in 1826, and the Family Newspaper in 1838. He was twice nominated for Governor, but his party was in the minority at that time. He was a voluminous writer and left several published volumes. He died suddenly Nov. 18, 1839, aged 66. His brother, Henry C., was a practical printer and was sometimes associated with him in the business. He married Jane, the sister of John Barber who established the Register, and whom he succeeded as its proprietor. She survived him several years. Of six sons, but one left posterity. The Albany Barbers were of a different family from those of Newport. (M.)

Obituary Notice of PHEBE SOUTHWICK MARSH.

Copied from the Friends' Review of Philadelphia. Vol. 43, No. 2, Page 25.

Died on the 10th of 6th mo., 1880, at her residence in Northbridge, Worcester Co., Mass., Phebe S. Marsh, in the 87th year of her age, an elder of Uxbridge Monthly Meeting. This dear Friend exemplified in an eminent degree, during her long and useful life, the spirit of her Divine Master. Very simple in her habits of living, yet her hand and heart were ever open to the cry of distress, and her charities, like the gentle dew, were distributed quietly and refreshingly on the various objects of her care. With a meek and loving spirit, yet firm in the adherence to our Christian principles, she filled the station of Elder most acceptably. In her last painful illness she often exclaimed "it is nothing to what my Saviour bore for me," and though in her anguish at times she was brought into near sympathy with our Blessed Saviour when He exclaimed, "My God, My God, why hast thou forsaken me!" yet we have the comforting assurance that His Grace was sufficient for her, and in humble dependence on the mercy of God in Jesus Christ, she has entered that rest which remaineth for the people of God.

The above twelve all lived to get married, and the nine boys were all tanners and curriers and carried on business for themselves.

ZADOCK SOUTHWICK started tanning in a small way in the town of Clinton, Dutchess Co., N. Y., and after two or three years bought the farm two miles north of Friend's Stone Meeting House in said town, and two miles from his father Lawrence, now (in 1875), known as Widow Halsted farm of 80 acres, and established the tanning and currying business quite largely for that day, 1789 or 1790. In 1802 and 1803, he established a tanning and currying business at Centreville, Ulster Co., starting James C. Moore, (who married his sister).

Zadock Southwick continued at Clinton until 1807, when he removed to Poughkeepsie, bought a property bounding on the Hudson River and erected a tannery thereon, starting a leather store in the village in connection with the currying business, and was very successful. In 1814, he purchased a landed property with ample water power in Greenfield, in the town of Warwarsing, Ulster Co., in the midst of a hemlock region, and established a hemlock sole leather tannery thereon, using water power to carry on the business, giving his oldest son Henry an interest therein and some years later selling him the business and property.

In 1816, he sold his business at Poughkeepsie to his sons Willett H., Robert B., and Edward C., and at Willett's death in 1818, Stephen took his place in the business. Willett H., son of Edward C., now (1875) occupies the premises and conducts the business, which has been continued uninterruptedly since first started in 1807.

Zadock in 1821, purchased a farm, about three miles lower down the stream, from the one bought in Greenfield in 1814, and two miles westerly from Ellenville and put up a large building enclosing the entire tanning operations and also large bark sheds and several tenements.

He died there Oct. 23, 1823, and was buried in the burial grounds of Friends, in Greenfield. All his sons were brought up to know the art and mystery of tanning.

Zadock let the society of Friends have the use of a building for holding meetings in Poughkeepsie, and was noted for his hospitality in entertaining Friends who came from a distance to attend meetings. His sons said facetiously that their father kept Quaker tavern. All of his children attended the Nine Partners Friend's School. At Zadock's death he appointed his son Adna H., to carry out his will, which was to provide for the education of those younger than himself and to pay them certain legacies on arriving of age.

Zadock was highly esteemed as a man of sterling integrity and for his business energy and capacity, for whatever he undertook he was successful in.

1018. Anna⁷, born May 27, 1823; married William Hull, a farmer, of Springdale, Iowa, where they now reside.

JONATHAN SOUTHWICK, the fifth child of George and Lydia Southwick, born Aug. 15, 1786, was married to Martha Irish about the first of 1811, and started at once for the western wilderness and located in what was then known as town of Willink, Niagara Co., Holland Purchase, now North Collins, Erie Co. From Buffalo (then a small village), to the place in which he located was a distance of twenty-five miles. The most of the distance was through dense woods with no road whatever. Their only effects were packed upon a rude sled, drawn by a yoke of oxen. Their journey completed, they stopped in the log cabin of one of the families who preceded them, till he could cut away the trees on his new possessions, a large enough place in which to erect a small log house. This occupied but few weeks and they were soon settled in their new house. Their nearest neighbor was one mile south; their nearest store and grist mill, in the town of Hamburg, requiring five or six days to make the round trip with oxen, through swamps, over hills, over logs and brush. Thus they began life in the new country, the sighing and moaning of the forest their only welcome; the howl of the wolf and the screech of the panther the only token of life outside their little inclosure. Here they toiled, cleared their land and became one of the most respected families of the rapidly populating country.

He started a nursery early and supplied the fruit trees for nearly all the oldest orchards in the surrounding towns. He lost the use of his left eye in the autumn of 1810, he was stooping to kindle a fire, when the knob upon the end of the crane (which had been left out) struck his eye, destroying his sight. Then again about the year 1827, he was stooping again in the dark, striking a swift stick, which destroyed the sight of his right eye: he was now totally blind. He still continued his farm work, raising trees and bee keeping. All the other senses so noticeable in persons who are blind seemed wonderfully developed in him, and many interesting anecdotes are told of his quick wit, and wonderful appreciation of things around him. Strange as it seems, he would work for hours in the garden, pulling weeds, but never destroying his plants or vegetables. Keeping bees, he used to make his own bee hives, and it is said upon one occasion, having made several, they were left outside upon the ground, some of them wrong side up; during the night there was a heavy rain storm and in the morning it was found each one contained water, showing his good workmanship, as we all know of many farmers with full possession of their sight who could not make a box to hold gravel, much less water. He, as well as all the early settlers, experienced much annoyance with wild animals. His sheep were always kept at night in a yard near the house, on several occasions the wolves would surround the house and sheep in great numbers, and the only way he had to protect his sheep was to keep a brisk fire burning in the large fire place, and keep throwing coals and burning brands from the door, which kept the wolves at a respectable distance. The house and barn which he erected in large old fashioned style about the year 1820, in place of his log cabin and brush barn, are still standing and in good repair.

He died Feb. 22, 1852, after a lingering illness caused by overheating himself the summer previous, weeding his garden, as he was always so fond of work, his ambition outlived his strength. Was in his 66th year when he died. His wife Martha outlived him twelve years, dying in the spring of 1864.

“Died suddenly, by a fall from his horse April 22, 1807, MR. REMINGTON SOUTHWICK, preceptor for several years of the Washington Academy (the first academy built in R. I.), in North Kingston. He was a man of superior genius, unassuming manners, placid, human and liberal in his disposition; of sound morality, and strictly honorable. He has left a disconsolate widow and two small children to lament the irreparable loss. He was highly respected and esteemed by all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and long, very long, will the inhabitants of the town in which he dwelt, and the patrons of the academy, regret the sad catastrophe, which deprived them of an invaluable member of society. Our only consolation is derived from the idea that "the memory of the just is blessed."—From the Providence Gazette of April 25, 1807.

IN MEMORIAM.

By Rev. Nathan S. Hill.

Using the beautiful imagery of Apostolic times, NATHAN SOUTHWICK "fell asleep," (Millville, Mass.), Dec. 11, 1845, aged 64 years.

If "the memory of the just is blessed;" if the departure of the wise and good from this sublunary sphere have any tendency to awaken the minds of others to the fleeting nature of their own existence; if this example of those who, "through faith and patience inherit the promises," be at all instrumental in leading survivors to walk in their steps, it is hoped that this brief memento of a most valuable member of the Christian church will not be without its use.

There were many qualities in the character of this excellent man which entitled him to peculiar respect, and rendered his death the occasion of no common sorrow. He possessed a sound understanding and a mind well stored with useful knowledge. In his nature there was a blending of mental faculties and moral powers that developed a character of remarkable transparency. The natural strength of his mind, and the strict inflexible integrity which marked his whole conduct, coupled with easy, unassuming social qualities, gave him an influence seldom possessed by persons who move in a much higher sphere, and little capable of being understood by those who had not the privilege of witnessing it.

Long before his attention was directed to the distinctive features of the religious life, we find him practicing the lesson of self-denial for the benefit of others. When a young man he was remarkably thoughtful for the welfare of his aged parents; he delighted to minister to their wants and cheer the sombre pathway to the tomb. Thoughtfulness of others interests followed him through the allotment of earthly experience.

In 1807 he married Amy Wilkinson, a union that was marked by domestic felicity throughout. As a son, husband and father, he is remembered by very many for loyalty and fidelity in every relation. He was honest, industrious and virtuous. Truth demands that we should testify that he was a man of strict honor and undeviating principle, qualities which in the imperfection of this world's institutions do not always contribute to pecuniary advancement.

In estimating character it is well for us to bear in mind the foundation stones on which it is erected. A good man is simply the prelude of righteousness. But that which our friend prized most was the blessed religion of our Saviour Christ. In mature life a genuine religious experience called him to unite with the Methodist church, to whose doctrines he was warmly attached, and whose faith he adorned with a meek and prayerful life. The spirit of unpretentious, cheerful piety which distinguished him amidst the more active scenes of life, did not forsake him through lingering months of pain and distress; and it strikingly displayed itself through the period of his decline. Death entered his chamber and was welcomed by him as a messenger from the throne of mercy, sent to tell him that the season of earthly discipline and labor was over, and that his mansion, eternal in the heavens, was preparing by the Lord that he faithfully served. The chamber of sickness was transfigured into the Christian's ascension room, and the pale messenger was foiled by the victory of faith, saying, "Death! I am not thine! I know in whom I believe; thou art simply my door-keeper to the land of immortal blessedness." With another of the true sons of God he could sing, in exulting lays:—

"That more and more a providence
Of love is understood,
Making the spring of time and sense
Sweet with eternal good."

"That death seems but a covered way
Which opens into light.
Wherein no blinded child can stray
Beyond the father's sight."

When the sun in the heavens had ceased shining, when the stars became dim, and while the death-damp was gathering, the inner man clothed in the spiritual body, yet lisped the fond farewell — "Peace and Joy." And thus repose came to the weary body — rest to the emancipated soul.

"Spirit! thy labor is o'er!
Thy time of probation is run,
Thy steps are now bound for the untrodden shore
And the race of immortals begun.

"Spirit! look not on the strife;
Or the pleasures of earth with regret.
Pause not on the threshold of limitless life,
To mourn for the day that is set.

- “ Spirit! no fetters can bind,
 No wicked have power to molest;
 There the weary, like thee — the wretched, shall find
 A haven, a mansion of rest.
- “ Spirit! how bright is the road
 For which thou art now on the wing!
 Thy home it will be, with thy Saviour and God.
 Their loud hallelujah to sing.”

IN MEMORIAM.

By Rev. Nathan S. Hill.

AMY WILKINSON SOUTHWICK, wife of Nathan Southwick, entered into rest, (Millville, Mass.), Sept. 21, 1856, aged 83 years.

Full of years and ripe in wisdom, this good woman justly merits the counsel of Solomon, “ Give her of the fruit of her hands; and let her own works praise her in the gates.” Not that this mother in Israel ever desired words of eulogy to be written in her behalf, for the thought never entered her mind. But when a life endeared to very many souls passes on and out of mortal ken, it is not amiss to speak of departed worth.

The eulogist is often tempted to overdraw the picture of human life; at the outset, then, I disclaim partial aids and extrinsic helps. We have only to deal with the presentation of a noble, matronly character. I well remember the bowed form looking toward the westering horizon; and as I recall the salient features of her life, I can truly aver that she typified the excellent woman described in the book of Proverbs, chapter XXI. Born in Cumberland, R. I., she was bred in those manners characteristic of the last century — great plainness, force of character, and usefulness in life.

While a young lady she attended worship held in the now celebrated “Elder Ballou Meeting House,” one of the ecclesiastical landmarks in Rhode Island. This plain, unpretentious two-story building, with shingled exterior, its massive, bolt-upright unpainted oaken pews, and whitewashed interior, was erected by the celebrated Rev. Maturin Ballou, a French Huguenot, about A.D. 1700. Here a colony of Huguenots settled, and in this wooden meeting house they assembled every Lord’s day, from an extensive rural circuit. In this connection it may not be out of place to mention that from this religious stock were descended the Rev. Hosea Ballou, the father of modern Universalism, and the Rev. Adin Ballou, now full of years, and beloved by all. This venerable place of worship has recently acquired greater reputation owing to the fact that here President Garfield’s mother, Ann Eliza Ballou, attended church when a young woman—she being a lineal descendant of the founder and first preacher of the parish.

From this source she imbibed those principles which moulded her subsequent career. Never making a profession of religion, she had what was, and is, vastly better, a living soul fed by the spirit of truth and holiness. The Sermon on the Mount was the guide of her life, and whosoever lays hold of its everlasting virtues, fails not to win the prize of our high calling in Christ Jesus. Her life was a living commentary of “patient continuance in well doing.”

To strong natural sense, and more than ordinary powers of mind, she united great energy, firmness, decision and dignity of character. As a friend and companion she was sociable, sincere, affectionate and attached. As a mother she was riveted to her family and endeared to her children by the warmest ties of tenderness and maternal solicitude. As a wife she evinced the kindest love and duty. Her time was entirely devoted to the lasting welfare of her family, and within that circle she exhibited the greatest industry and desire for their comfort and happiness.

Indomitable perseverance was a prominent characteristic, to which were allied simplicity of manners and unstinted hospitality. Surviving her beloved husband by a decade of years, she loved to sit by her window and watch the glinting sunset hues round about the cherished grassy mound in the cemetery, not far removed. The deeper themes of life were familiar to her thought. The present and future life were connected in her mind as the evening and morning of a day; she looked forward with holy joy to the exchange of worlds, in assured hope of being reunited to the dear ones who had preceded. She contemplated death without dismay, and devoutest hope filled her longing soul. The closing scene of her earthly existence at once displayed mild and unostentatious piety and evinced the beneficial tendency of those principles that had buoyed her up during the trials of life. Amid painful sufferings not a murmur escaped her lips. Resigned to the will of God she passed within the vale of shadows, leaning on the Divine rod and staff, in certainty of the resurrection unto eternal life in Christ Jesus our Lord.

IN MEMORIAM.

By Rev. Nathan S. Hill.

DAVID WILKINSON SOUTHWICK, youngest son of Nathan and Amy W. Southwick, passed on and out of sight, Sept 18, 1867, aged 50 years.

When the living presence of virtue is withdrawn from human observation, we derive a melancholy pleasure from allowing our thoughts to dwell on the picture which memory has portrayed on the tablet of the heart, and from recalling to view the various excellencies which excited our esteem or won our admiration. Whilst, too, we indulge this sad privilege, we rescue from the hands of the spoiler those imperishable qualities of mind and heart which chiefly endeared the lost one to us, and preserve all that has power to soothe the pang of separation.

In adverting to the character of the lamented subject of this brief memoir, we feel warranted in saying that it was truly Christian. The religious principles which he had imbibed in childhood, whilst they proved to him a source of consolation and good hope, were, doubtless, the spring whence flowed the numerous virtues which adorned his life. His was not the noisy demonstrative type of religion, pitched to the keynote of other men's experiences, but true inwardness of life—the indwelling light seeking expression by inherent righteousness—in a word, not profession before men, but possession of vital religion in the sight of God and holy angels that do His will. With our beloved Whittier he could sing:—

“To do Thy will is more than praise.
As words are less than deeds;
And simple trust can find Thy ways,
We miss with chart of creeds.

“Our Friend, our Brother, and our Lord,
What may Thy service be?
Nor name, nor form, nor ritual word,
But simply follow Thee.”

Early instructed in the path of righteousness, our friend evinced those qualities of mind, heart and soul that made him foremost in every good work. According to the Christian revelation, and according to the example of Christ, we live when we are true to ourselves as moral, spiritual, immortal beings. To live in the best sense which the Gospel presents, is to cherish high aims and pure purposes; to feel that we have souls and treat them worthily, and to conserve the interests of humanity. Because our friend was actuated by these noble ideals it is fitting that we offer a brief word as to his life and work.

He was born in the “Quaker City,” near the “old homestead” from whence emanated a large branch of the Southwick family. It soon became manifest that the lad was fond of study and the best of good books; but the hampering conditions of those days were not favorable to extended mental culture. Work on the farm and a few months schooling constituted the educational outfit. But with these meagre advantages he was not content, and thereupon commenced a course of self-education. How wisely and well he succeeded, is testified by those who said he was thoroughly informed on every subject. In the village Lyceum he became a proficient debater, never espousing a theme that his conscience questioned. After making progress in the study of books, he next visited the literary savans of Boston and Cambridge, and was on intimate terms with the Faculty of Amherst College. For quite a while he was a correspondent of the Woonsocket Patriot, a paper that enjoyed the largest circulation in the compact state of Rhode Island.

Those who witnessed his every-day career were aware of the purity and sanctity of spirit and of life, no less manifest and impressive in his earlier than in his later years. In his own consciousness he was ever within temple gates and on holy ground. While engaged in artisan pursuits or tilling the soil he lived in a world all his own, holding converse with the great men of the past, or meditating themes propounded by the leaders of modern opinion. Poetry, painting and sculpture opened vistas of thought and sources of knowledge that enabled him to pursue studies under most disparaging circumstances. While living in an ideal world his vision was not closed to the duties of the ever living present, for his heart ever beat warmly in behalf of humanity. In earlier days when to espouse the Abolition Movement, the Temperance Reform, and other philanthropic activities was to be branded as a come-outer; but none the less did our friend lend sympathy and co-operation, for duty urged, with compelling force, enrollment among the vanguards of social and political progress. In behalf of truth and right he was content to stand where God and conscience had prepared the way. But with this earnest boldness in the right, one saw blended a meekness and gentleness rarely witnessed among men.

There was one characteristic—nay we may call it the guiding star of his destiny—Aspiration. Never content with past achievement, a laudible ambition inspired to redoubled progress. In the midst of a useful career the life endeared to so many was suddenly cut short. Why, we cannot discern. But in the spirit of the larger hope begotten of Christ, we are assured that every one who goes from us to the world of light goes holding an invisible chain of love by which to draw us there. Beyond the storms and darkness of mortality; beyond this mysterious drama of sin, disappointment, toil, privation, sorrow and the grave, we behold the transporting scenes of that spirit land, destined to be the final inheritance of all the countless millions who have been, or will yet be, created subject to misery and death here, that they may be trained up for the more exquisite enjoyment of God hereafter.

The soul has been called into existence to soar upwards when the body goes back to its original elements, to span unlimited space and measure endless ages, to travel the broad and boundless of a destiny that has no end. The broken purposes that fail on earth are carried out hereafter, and the worn, shattered banner of humanity, torn and drooping here, is planted again hereafter upon a happier shore.

“ To Heaven is gathered one by one.
 In its capacious breast.
 All that is pure and permanent
 And beautiful and blest.

“ The family is scattered yet,
 Though of one home and heart :
 Part militant in earthly gloom,
 In heavenly glory part.

“ But who can speak the rapture when
 The number is complete ;
 And all the children sundered now
 Around one Father meet ?

“ One fold, one Shepherd, one employ ;
 One everlasting home.
 Our Father's house, from whose dear rest
 No wanderer e'er shall roam.”

IN MEMORIAM.

By Rev. Nathan S. Hill.

MRS. REBECCA BOWDITCH SOUTHWICK, wife of William Southwick, passed from things visible to things invisible, May 23, 1816, aged 29 years.

An intimate friend at the time of her decease, testified as follows:—"The premature death of this estimable lady, is a subject of deep affliction to her family and friends. She died with animated hopes of a happy futurity."

When the earthly setting of a human life is removed from sight, we treasure all that made existence desirable or happy. Although our friend had scarcely reached the number of years allotted to a generation; yet the quality was of the highest order. To a mind unusually bright and active, there were added moral qualities and personal beauty that enhanced the value of her life. Keeness and vivacity, were prominent qualities, while in the domain of the higher life there was an innate consciousness of spiritual virtues. Insight and oversight ever witnessed the bright side of things and referred the guidance of life and the destiny of man to the Eternal Goodness. Living in such an atmosphere, departure from this world in unfolding womanhood was welcomed as the angel of God sent for beneficent purposes. The immediate cause of her demise was owing to a pestilential fever that devastated nearly every household of the neighborhood and which she contracted in faithful performance of Christian duty at the bed-side of the sick and dying. When prostrated, the faith that had served in the active sphere of life was all-sufficient and brought its exceeding great reward—the open vision and the company of the dear departed. With yearning love did she await the dissolution of the earthly tabernacle, and so impressed beholders as to produce the conviction that what we call death is not the end but the glory of going on.

“God giveth quietness at last!
The common way once more is passed
From pleading tears and lingerings fond
To fuller life and love beyond.

“What to shut eyes hath God revealed?
What hear the ears that death has sealed?
What undreamed beauty passing show
Requites the loss of all we know?

“O silent land to which we move!
Enough if then alone we love.
And mortal need can ne'er outgrow
What it is wanting to bestow.

“O pure soul! from that far-off shore
Float some sweet song the waters o'er:
Our faith confirm. our fears dispel,
With the dear voice we love so well.”

wick, died on the 29th of April, at her residence in Grantville, Mass., in the 75th year of her age.

All survivors of the old abolition band will remember her as one of the very earliest, the noblest, and the most faithful of that small army of moral combatants who fought so bravely and perseveringly for the deliverance of the downtrodden. Mrs. Southwick was born and educated in the Society of Friends, and to their calmness of demeanor she added indomitable persistence in the path of duty.

One of the most exciting affairs that ever occurred in Boston was known as the Baltimore Slave Case. Two girls had escaped in a Boston vessel, and when about to be carried back, were brought out by a writ of habeas corpus. All Boston was in a ferment, for and against the fugitives. The commercial world were determined that this Southern property should be restored to the white claimants, and the abolitionists were determined that this Southern property should be restored to the white claimants, and the abolitionists were determined that it should remain in the possession of the original owners, until a "bill of sale from the Almighty" could be produced. The well-known "Father Snowdon" was then alive, and by his vigilance and ingenious arrangements, efficiently aided by Mrs. Southwick, the slaves were, at a given signal, spirited away from the crowded court-room, and conveyed out of the city. The agent of the slaveholders happened to be standing near Mrs. Southwick, and while he was gazing in astonishment at the empty space where the fugitives had been an instant before.

she turned her large gray eyes upon him, and said very calmly, "Thy prey hath escaped thee."

Wherever working or thinking was to be done for the advancement of our righteous cause, there was Thankful Southwick, ever ready with wise counsel and energetic action. She and her excellent husband were among the very first to sustain Garrison in his unequal contest with the strong Goliath of slavery. At that time they were in affluent circumstances, and their money was poured forth freely for the unpopular cause, which had as yet found no adherents among the rich. Their commodious and every-way comfortable house was a caravansary for fugitive slaves and for anti-slavery pilgrims from all parts of the country. At the anniversary meetings, when most of the city abolitionists were anxious to have for their guests Friend Whittier, or Angelina Grimke, or Theodore Weld, or Hon. Mr. Birney, or George Thompson, or some other lions of the cause, Joseph and Thankful Southwick were quietly looking about for such anti-slavery brothers and sisters as were too little known to be likely to receive invitations. And through all their long and honorable lives this worthy couple retained the same characteristics. Always kindly and unpretending, clear-sighted to perceive the right, and faithful in following it, wheresoever it might lead. They were upright in all their dealings with the world, tender and true in the relations of private life, and the memory they have left is a benediction.—Lydia Maria Child, in Anti-Slavery Standard.

HENRY POWERS, JR., son of Henry and Elizabeth (Southwick), was born Nov. 28, 1813. He was tall and well-formed and a very fine looking man. He was working for a Mrs. Haden (widow), who lived on George Hill, at Grafton, Worcester Co., Mass. Mrs. Haden and family esteemed Henry very highly. There lived near Mrs. Haden's, a Mr. Brooks, a shoemaker, a very quarrelsome, meddlesome man; his boys were in the habit of stealing Mrs. Haden's fruit, and Brooks accused Powers of throwing apples at his boys when they were trespassing, but it was proven in court that it was not Powers that threw apples at the boys.

Brooks went to Mrs. Haden's, Oct. 30, 1835, and told Henry Powers that he had come to have a settlement; Powers told him he had nothing to settle; further conversation followed and Brooks attempted to enter the barn, when Mr. Powers pushed him out and told him to go home. Mrs. Haden knowing that Brooks was about the barn, went and told him she wished he would go home. She told Powers that he had better come to the house as soon as he had finished the job which he was at, which was painting a plough. Powers started for the house, which was on the opposite side of the road from the barn, and it was the testimony of those who saw the whole transaction that Powers passed Brooks quietly, not dreaming of Brook's murderous intent, but just as Powers passed Brooks, the latter struck a back-handed blow with a knife which he held in his hand behind him; the knife entered Power's neck under the ear. Powers turned towards Brooks and putting up his arms said, "pray do not use a knife," but Brooks continued his blows, stabbing him in the breast and arms. Powers then started and walked a few steps towards the house, Brooks followed and stabbed him twice in the back of the neck. Powers stepped a few steps and fell, and as he fell Brooks stepped up to him and kicked him and said, "Damn you, if you have not got enough I will give you more." Mrs. Haden and her daughters and three or four others witnessed the whole transaction. Mrs. Haden rushed to his assistance, but he breathed only once or twice after she reached him. The doctors who examined his wounds stated that there were five wounds, either one of which would have proved fatal. Brooks helped carry him into the house and then went home and told his wife he had killed Powers; she replied, "I begged of you not to carry a knife." The men who worked in the shop with Brooks knew he intended to have a fight with Powers, and were out on an eminence to witness the affair.

He had ground a shoe knife for the purpose, grinding the back as well as front. Powers was a very powerful man and Brooks was a very small man, and if Powers had known of his intentions he could easily have defended himself, and if he wanted to fight could have whipped three like Brooks. Powers was a member of the Society of Friends, and was at a friend's house at Northbridge, only the Sunday before, and the subject of fighting came up, and Powers stated that he scorned fighting and that he would sooner run than fight. His body was brought to his father's in Berlin, and the funeral was at the Friend's meeting house in Bolton, the next day. His father made a most impressive prayer; he prayed for his son's murderer and hoped the government would be lenient and show him mercy; prayed that he might not be executed; there was hardly a dry eye in the vast audience. Brooks was arrested, tried and sentenced to six years in the state prison. He served but four years of the six and was pardoned out. Brooks had shot a man previous to this murder. He was out hunting with another man and they saw a squirrel. His companion was about to shoot the squirrel when Brooks told him not to fire as he wanted to shoot it. His companion shot the squirrel and Brooks shot at him: the shot passed through his side, but as the man was not killed there was nothing done about it.

When Henry Powers was killed, the family consisted of father, mother, brother and four sisters. Five months after, the mother mourned herself to death; seven years after the father died and ten years after one sister died; and eleven years from Henry Power's death, two more of the sisters died, leaving the youngest sister a remnant of a once happy family.

“HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.”

I have been for a long time desirous that the public might be made acquainted with certain acts in the life of Philadelphia (Southwick) Cook, a lady now about 73 years of age, residing at Millville, Worcester Co., Mass. However unassuming may be her pretensions and however little she may be at present known to fame, it is the opinion of the writer of this, that she, more than any other person, is entitled to the honor of having given the first impulse to the cause of temperance in this country.

It was in the year 1822, now twenty years ago, when the evil of intemperance overshadowed this land as a deep darkness; when the fumes of alcohol arose alike from the sideboards of the affluent and the cupboards of the indigent; when he who drank was honored, and he who refrained was ridiculed; when the wise and the good of the land looked upon the scene around them without being sensible of the magnitude of the evil, or despaired of doing anything to stop its devastating course. It was at this period that the subject of this article, unaided and unfriended, steps forth as a bold and fearless champion in the cause of total abstinence; but at that early day she boldly assumed the ground now advocated by the more ardent and active in the cause, her motto then was "Touch not, taste not," and so firm, so decided, so zealous was she, that many thought her not in her right mind. She was unceasing in her efforts; she wrote, she travelled, she talked, she warned, exhorted, entreated and prayed; she visited from house to house, and from village to village, urging all whom she could induce to listen, to refrain from the use of intoxicating drinks, or, as she was in the habit of calling it, "the liquid fire." But what renders her course the more remarkable and praiseworthy is, that she was not in a situation to command money to pay her expenses in her travels on these errands of mercy, but had to labor by the day at the trade of a tailoress, at small wages, in order to earn a little money for the above purpose, and when she had thus accumulated a small sum, she would immediately go forth to battle in the cause. She succeeded at an early day in forming a society in her own neighborhood, consisting of a few females, but she plainly saw that in order to accomplish any great good it was necessary to enlist the wise, the philanthropic and influential of the land.

For this purpose she visited the venerable Moses Brown at Providence. He acknowledged the evil and deplored it, but despaired of doing anything to stop its devastating progress. She also visited Governor Fenner, but met with little encouragement except kind words and wishes. She next visited Boston and Quincy, and called on John Quincy Adams, then president of the United States, who was on a visit to his native town. In listening to her account of her visit to that remarkable man, I was strongly impressed with the candor, meekness and simplicity which he observed in the interview. Mrs. Cook remarked that he received her very kindly and listened attentively, remarking in reply that he did not agree with her fully, that he had been in the habit of occasionally drinking wine, and he had observed no bad effects from it. She rejoined, urging the influence of his example, etc., and concluded by saying "I advise thee to leave it off entirely." He thanked her, and upon her taking leave, he assured her that he would take the subject into serious consideration. She visited many other persons of influence, such as ministers of the Gospel, and urged the importance of the subject and entreated them to preach upon it. Her efforts apparently met with little success, nor was there any cause for a less sanguine mind than hers to hope for any great good from these efforts until about four years after she commenced, when she received from Boston the first copy of a temperance newspaper called the National Philanthropist, which had been established by an association of a few gentlemen in that city. Upon receiving this paper she remarked that if the joy of Columbus at the first sight of land in the new world after his many trials, fatigues and disappointments was great, it surely was not greater than hers at this first dawning of a glorious light upon the temperance cause. Of course we cannot at this time determine precisely how much the world is indebted to this woman for the glorious results of the cause of temperance, but we think we may safely conclude, when we recall her visits to a Brown, an Adams and a Fenner, and many others, the influential and the philanthropic of the country, that to her more than any other person are we all indebted for giving the first impulse to this glorious undertaking, and that she is entitled to the thanks and gratitude of every well wisher to mankind. Mrs. Cook has now resting upon her the weight of seventy-three winters, and although she has undergone many hardships, much laborious toil and anxiety of mind, many thanks for the blessings of a temperate life, her mind is as clear and unclouded and her nerves as steady as when she first unfurled the banner of "Total abstinence" and steps forth single handed to battle against the hosts of the army of King Alcohol. Long may she live and long may she be enabled to continue her warfare in that glorious cause, even till every vestige of drunkenness and inebriety is banished from our land. Hoping she may meet whenever she goes (what is more highly to be prized than gold or silver) the welcome of "well done, good and faithful servant," and that meed of applause which always attends on virtuous and philanthropic exertions, is the sincere hope and desire of

P. S. THAYER.

The venerable DANIEL FARNUM of Northbridge, the oldest man in that town or vicinity, departed this life Dec. 10, 1879, aged 95 years and 18 days. The deceased was of the fifth generation in descent from John Farnum, an early settler at the ancient town seat in Mendon, and a little later in the southerly part of Uxbridge. The lineage is John, Moses, Moses, David, Daniel. His grandfather, Moses, was an eminent minister in the Society of Friends, whose memory is still fragrant in many bosoms. The deceased has dwelt through all the mature part of his long life, in Northbridge, near the border of Uxbridge. He was the oldest son of a large family, and is survived only by his youngest brother, Samuel J. Farnum, formerly mayor of Newburg, N.Y., now resident in or near Poughkeepsie, and past his three score and ten. The wife of his youth preceded him into the higher life about seven years ago. Two sons and a daughter with their companions, and numerous grandchildren, were privileged to soothe and cheer his old age, and to nourish him tenderly at his bedside in his last sickness.

He was born with a good constitution, which he preserved well by regular and temperate habits, experiencing but little sickness, and retaining his faculties in remarkable vigor till within the last year. His was emphatically a sound mind in a sound body; he was characterized for sound common sense, a strong sentiment of justice and honesty, insistence on his own rights, and respect for those of others; economy, simplicity, and hospitality in domestic affairs; was provident, faithful, and kind in the family circle; a peaceable, prudent, and accommodating neighbor; a serviceable, judicious, and trustworthy townsman, honored with the principal municipal offices, including those of selectman and representative in the legislature; a reliable counselor in financial matters; a lover of his country and its liberties; a firm opposer of slavery and oppression; sparing in religious professions; of broad tolerance towards all denominations; liberal in theology, and a steadfast hoper in the final triumph of good over evil. These were qualities and characteristics which in the deceased overshadowed the incidental imperfections common to human nature. He was warmly attached to the interests of the town, and was a constant attendant on town meetings, the last one he attended being in 1878, when in his 94th year. Among the positions of public financial trust he occupied, was that of director in the Blackstone Bank of Uxbridge, over twenty years. He had been expecting his departure for three years, expressed his entire resignation to the Divine disposal, and passed away in the confident assurance of the life everlasting. Appropriate funeral honors were paid to his memory and remains, at his late residence, the 13th, with ministrations by Rev. Geo. S. Ball of Upton, Rev. Adin Ballou of Hopedale, and now his mortal part sleeps with the dust of his ancestors in Friends' Cemetery at South Uxbridge. All the numerous descendants of the deceased were present at the funeral, except the four great grandchildren.

MASA BRANCH SOUTHWICK was the son of Jonathan and Sarah (Branch) Southwick, of the town of Orwell, Rutland County, Vermont, born April 5, 1801, his mother died when he was thirteen years of age. He was remarkably kind to his younger brothers and sisters, exercising an almost parental care over them, his superiority of character enabled him to have a great influence over them for their good. During his early youth he secured a good business education, and being an excellent observer and thinker he became a person of very general and useful information, which he used for his mechanical inventions, and horticultural pursuits. He, like many before him, felt that knowledge was power, he therefore learned to speak and write the English and French languages correctly. He was apprenticed at thirteen years of age to learn the wool carding, cloth dressing and dyeing business. When he was seventeen years of age, his employer, Judge Moore, of Champlain Village, N.Y., sent him to take charge of a new mill near Chambly, Canada. Afterwards Judge Moore built another mill at Mont St. Hilaire, Canada and admitted him as a partner in the business, and at the death of Judge Moore he purchased this property of the heirs. He was married to Miss Eliza Andres, Feb. 5, 1827. she was the daughter of Samuel Andres, of L'acadie, Huntingdon Co., 21 miles S. E. of Montreal. May 17, 1827, he settled at Mont St. Hiliare; his wife and himself being in perfect accord he felt all the more encouraged in his enterprises and efforts to perfect his inventions. They were noted for their hospitality, far and wide.

A DREAM OF HOME.

Home! home! at last I've found thee!
Thou dearest spot on earth:
Each nook and tree around thee
And e'en the rough old hearth.
Are dearer now than ever,
Since far from thee and thine
I've roamed o'er hill and river;
O! there's no home like mine! — M. B. S.

He invented many improvements in the flax manufacture, which are acknowledged to be the best in use and for which patents were obtained by him in Canada and the U. S., he also obtained a patent for desiccating meats and vegetables, which was approved by Prof. Horseman, of Cambridge, Mass. He sent specimens of dried meats, apples, potatoes, etc., to the Paris Exposition, for which a bronze medal was awarded to him, and in Canada a silver medal was awarded to him by the Canadian government. His widow has now (1881), potatoes which were dried 26 years ago and are as good and fresh as when dried; by putting hot water on it sufficient to moisten it, in a minute it will be mashed potatoes, and most excellent to eat. For his mechanical skill and inventive genius he was made an honorary member of the Montreal Mechanics' Institute, in 1854. He was in business in St. Hilaire 57 years, and held a commission for the local Courts, for many years. He held office and performed many duties in the municipality, holding the rank of Major in the Canadian Militia for many years with honor.

About ten years before his death he had a sun-stroke, from which he never fully recovered. He died October 16, 1879, of apoplexy, and was buried in Mount Royal Cemetery, Montreal, Lot 1257, Section B.

1517. Nathan Southwick^s, born Jan. 31, 1845 ; was a Universalist preacher in Brooklyn, N. Y., in 1880.

REV. NATHAN SOUTHWICK HILL was born in the town of Woonsocket, R. I., Jan. 24, 1846. It being a manufacturing centre, considerable attention had been paid to educational facilities, of which Mr. Hill availed himself, passing through the different grades and completing the High School course of study at 17 years of age. Subsequently he studied at Scholfield's Commercial College, in Providence, R. I. In 1869 he resolved to prepare for the Christian ministry, and for this purpose he entered the Divinity School connected with Tufts' College, four miles from Boston, under control of the Universalist Church.

Naturally studious and fond of good books, school exercises were never irksome, and he was never so happy as when some abstruse problem was satisfactorily solved. One of his earliest characteristics was a fondness to see how his playthings were made; he was never satisfied to take this knowledge at second hand, but he must take to pieces and then re-construct; and we may add that in mature life this tendency still lingers and is manifest in his chosen work. Before he was eleven years old he had twice read the New Testament; and without any solicitation he presented himself to his venerable pastor, the late lamented Rev. John Boyden, for membership in the Universalist church of his native town. After a rigid examination on the entire New Testament he was accepted, and Christmas day 1858, witnessed his reception into the Church of Christ, of which he continues a consistent professor, and a staunch advocate of Liberal Christianity.

January 1, 1878, he received and accepted an invitation to the pastorate of the Third Universalist Church, Brooklyn, N. Y., which position he occupied for two years. When his resignation became known the Brooklyn Star averred: "We regret to learn that Rev. Nathan S. Hill is about to sever his connection.

as pastor of the Church of the Reconciliation. During the reverend gentleman's stay in Brooklyn, he has drawn around him by a sort of magnetic influence a host of friends who wish him success wherever he may go."

The Rev. C. H. Leonard, D. D., of Tufts College says of him: "We gladly commend him as a christian man and devoted student. While in college his whole course was marked by conscientious study and religious devotion. We are glad to say, also, that since he left the formal study of the Divinity School, he has not relaxed in earnestness, but has studied under the direction, to some extent, of his old teachers."

The Hon. L. W. Ballou, M. C., a valued friend has a kindly word. "It gives me great pleasure to commend Rev. Nathan S. Hill, as a most worthy, conscientious, upright christian minister, with social qualities of a high order, a devoted student, industrious and faithful to all the duties of his profession, and whose moral character and conversation have been exemplary from his youth."

His preparation for college was made under the instruction of Rev. Simeon Doggett, of his native town. He passed through a regular collegiate course at Brown University, Providence, R. I., and studied with Dr. Usher Parsons, receiving his medical diploma from the Brunswick Medical School, Maine. Being thus thoroughly grounded in his profession, he commenced practice in Welfleet, Mass., where he remained three years. From there he removed to Millville, Blackstone, Mass., and settled for the remainder of his life, about forty years. He was a man of sterling character; of vigorous powers of mind; well balanced, and of remarkably even temperament. Among his prominent traits were his strong reasoning faculties; his sound judgment and good common sense, always manifested by his fidelity to principle; and a firm adherence to his convictions of right and duty. There was no man in the community whose opinion was more respected, or better entitled to respect, than his. The purity of his motives and his steady consistent pursuit of all objects approved by his sense of right and justice, were marked attributes in his character. In public life he has at times held most of the town offices, and was twice elected to the Massachusetts State Senate, where he served with honor to himself and the towns he represented. He was an active member, and for two years President of the Worcester District Medical Society. He was officially connected with the Massachusetts Temperance Union, and was a staunch advocate and efficient worker in this most important field. In his professional capacity he was able, faithful, always prompt in his engagements, kind and attentive to his patients and sincere and upright in his counsels. During the later part of his life he was an active member of the Society of Friends, honored and highly esteemed. He died June 9, 1875.

For thirteen years he was a member of the Hopedale Community, at Milford, Mass., founded by Adin Ballou and others. He is a justice of the peace, a member of the school committee, a deputy of the Worcester County Lodge of Good Templars; hence he believes in the equality of the sexes and of course in woman's rights to the ballot. He is a friend of the working man, but not a believer in strikes, and he believes moreover in progress here and hereafter, and that an honest man is the noblest work of God. In 1814, his father Zadock purchased a landed property with a good water power and built thereon a tannery and put his son Henry in possession of it to do the business as partners. About 1820, he (Zadock) sold to his son Henry the entire business, and Zadock bought a property about three miles down the stream, called the Beerskill, and erected in 1821 a tannery at that place. A few years after, Henry's tannery was burned, and he felt very discouraged, but the neighbors held him in such esteem that they clubbed together and delivered the lumber necessary to erect a new tannery, which he promptly did and was successful as a tanner. He was elected many times to town offices; was a very industrious and upright man, and highly esteemed for his sterling integrity and independence of character. He was a very active and efficient anti-mason after the murder of William Morgan by the Free Masons. He was a practical temperance man and a friend to the poor; also a plain straight Foxite Quaker. He reared a large and respectable family of children who revere his memory. He died March 26, 1871, aged about 80 years. He was buried in the Friends' burying ground at Greenfield in the town of Wawarsing, Ulster Co., N.Y.

SARAH SOUTHWICK, daughter of Zadock and Elizabeth (Carpenter) Southwick, was a person of superior education and most excellent intellectual qualities. She received a part of her education at John Comly's boarding school in Pennsylvania, not far from Philadelphia. Her physical constitution was never very vigorous and strong, consequently she gave much attention to the laws of health and the best and most natural remedies for disease, and by so doing lived many years longer than she otherwise would have done. She was very decided against the use of calomel, never using it herself and advising her family not to use it. She was one of the earliest abolitionists, and wrote many articles for the press and was a zealous advocate for equal rights before the law for the people of all nations and colors. She was a conscientious and consistent Friend or Quaker, and sometimes spoke in meeting very acceptably; she was a warm advocate of home education and thought mothers should be more careful to practice what they preached, and by so doing would materially aid in building up good characters. Her life was worthy of imitation. She was always kind and considerate for the poor, particularly the worthy poor, by rendering timely aid in their hour of distress. It is the good mothers who are the makers of good men and women. She was a most zealous Anti-Masonic advocate, and said that if Masonry was good it need not be sworn to, and their light should not be hid under a bushel, and that true benevolence should assist all good people without being bound by oath to assist a brother Mason, only because he was a Mason. She was highly esteemed by all who knew her, and none knew her but to praise. She was a very industrious person, and although not having a strong constitution, she accomplished a great amount of work by her great method, both physical and mental. One of her mottoes was, "be just and fear not;" another was, "right was right through all the world should err." She was one of the most faithful of mothers, and always said she wished to leave her children the best of legacies, viz.: a good education, both by example and precept.

JOHN CALLER was a person of remarkable memory and strength of mind, he was a great reader. His parents dying when he was very young, he was apprenticed to a saddler and harness maker, a Quaker named James Jenkins, at Pleasant Valley, Ulster Co., N. Y. After his marriage he found that the business did not agree with him, he quit it and carried on a small farm, and grocery store, at Poughkeepsie, N.Y., for a few years, and bought a larger farm and quit store keeping; and in 1835 he sold it and engaged in freighting business to New York city. He was afterwards elected as Magistrate of Poughkeepsie for several years.

ADNA H. SOUTHWICK was born April 30, 1803, and was 20 years old when his father Zadock died (in 1823). He being the oldest son at home, was given the charge of the business, consisting of the Franklin sole leather tannery, capable of tanning 12,000 hides per year; a saw mill; a store of general merchandise; a shoe shop; a farm, etc., and was to pay the four younger children their legacies and finish their education, and take care of his mother; all of which he faithfully did. By his untiring energy and good judgement, with the aid of his older brother, he was able in 1831 to buy a large landed property of 500 acres of beautiful valley land at a place called "Napanoch," with a great water power, where he built a superb grist and flouring mill, costing $20,000, and an axe and edge tool factory, where they made 200 dozen axes per day, and other tools and machinery. He then built a very large stone sole leather tannery, 200 feet long, 60 feet wide, and three stories high, which with the machinery cost $54,000; its capacity was 25,000 hides, i. e., 50,000 sides of sole leather per year. He then took into partnership his brothers Richard and George and built a large store for selling general merchandise for their help. They built a hotel, and being near the Delaware and Hudson Canal, had two canal boats and about twenty-five teams to haul bark and do other work. They also had a wagon maker's shop, shoe factory, tailor shop, and about twenty-five dwelling houses; but a complication of disasters befel them, and in the financial tornado of 1837 they were compelled to surrender. Adna H. with his brother Stephen then went to Galveston, Texas, taking with them a frame for a large building which they erected at Galveston, which subsequently became very valuable as the city grew. Adna H. then sold out to his brother Stephen and returned to his family, who did not go with him. He then engaged in several enterprises and finally became a real estate broker in New York City, dying Feb. 11, 1875. His career was a very checkered one, but always marked with great energy of character.

EMMA D. SOUTHWICK⁷, (Philip⁶, Edward⁵, Joseph⁴, Lawrence³, Daniel², Lawrence¹), daughter of Philip R. and Amelia (Dexter), born April 5, 1834; married, in Westford, Mass., June 28, 1880, Dr. J. Bernard Brinton, of Philadelphia.

EMMA D. SOUTHWICK, born in 1834, the eldest of seven children, attended private schools until she entered Bradford Academy, where she spent four years. In 1861, she entered the Mansion House Hospital at Alexandria, as nurse, the demand at that time being very great for care-takers for the sick and otherwise disabled soldiers who were filling our hospitals. She spent nearly a year there in active service, having under her care about sixty men at a time; at first all cases of sickness, but for the last months wounded men entirely, where a rich and most interesting work was opened to her. Then after a vacation at home, she found occupation in a ward in Armory Square Hospital at Washington, where the nurses were all volunteers, and being encouraged to make everything as pleasant as possible, the wards were arranged so pleasantly that many a man said it was like going into his mother's room at home. Here she spent nearly a year, ministering to many hundred men, there being among the younger ones many who called her mother. Her schemes for diverting the minds of her patients were various and often amusing, not only would she introduce games and join in them herself, but she would devise something useful for them to do; and as the hospital stockings were never mended when sent to the wards, she would get the men together each week, and providing needles and yarn, have a mending bee. The city people being very kind too, entertainments were often gotten up and the patients gathered at Miss Southwick's ward, and thus many tedious hours were saved our crippled boys. Her work ceased when the battles of the Wilderness led to the opening of hospitals at Fredericksburgh, when with two other ladies, securing passes from the surgeon, she went into the field work, first at Fredericksburgh, where a general care was given the men lying closely together in 10 by 100 buildings; and from six in the morning until ten at night, there was no cessation from dressing wounds, and providing food for the sufferers.

From Fredericksburgh to White House Landing, and then up the James River in the 5th and 2d corps, she found all she could do, until prostrated with the heat, bad water, and over-work, she was taken to Alexandria and then home. But after a while, in 1864, she found a field of labor again at Harpers Ferry, where she made many improvements, but suffering severely from chills and fever, she accompanied her cousin Mrs. Stephenson and son to South Carolina, where they spent five or six months on a plantation on Helena Island; Miss Southwick acting as teacher for two plantations, caring for those up to 14 years of age in the morning, and the older ones every afternoon.

Here, too, she found scope for other energies, nursing the old and sick; feeding the hungry little ones left at home for hours together, while their mothers were obliged to be at work; and Sundays gathering them in groups to read and sing. They made also pleasant trips to Savannah and Charleston just after Sherman had made his "march to the sea," and saw the first enthusiastic gathering of the colored people and the desolation of the southern cities. The call for teachers for the Freedmen being very loud, Miss Southwick entered that work at Richmond and Petersburg, and was attached to it for about three years.

Then in 1868, with an invalid sister, she accompanied a party of ladies through fifteen months' journeying from Glasgow, Scotland, to Naples, spending a winter in Rome and studying with intense interest the wonders of the old world. After this, from 1870 to 1873, was spent at home.

Being desirous of attending the Universal Exhibition at Vienna, in 1873, Miss Southwick sought and obtained a commission to write for the Boston Daily Traveller and Commercial Bulletin; and spent seven months in Vienna, travelling through Switzerland, France and England; writing letters for the press and taking part in the first meeting ever held in Hungary, of the Unitarians of that country, England and America, and which she considers one of the most interesting gatherings ever held, and of which a full account was given in the Traveller and Christian Register.

While at Vienna, the breaking up of our commission and generally disgraceful appearance of our department, led to a desire on her part to take an active place in the Centennial Exhibition, and a year before its opening she accepted a position offered her (in the office of the Massachusetts state commission) where she made use of the knowledge gained, for the general good, and as her own work made application for space for the building of a log cabin to illustrate life in New England, one hundred years ago. The idea being to furnish it with articles, and keep it open to the public every day; with six ladies always there knitting, spinning, quilting, netting, making lace, etc.; these ladies to change every day, having half of their time to themselves and with no expense excepting their passage out and back. Then beside the old house a modern kitchen where a complete contrast would be shown, and an old fashioned dinner prepared and sold each day.

This work being accepted, was successfully carried out during the whole exhibition, receiving (it was estimated) half a million visitors, and giving the benefits of the exhibition to one hundred and twenty persons, many of whom could not have visited Philadelphia in any other way. Miss Southwick having closed her work, went the last of Nov., 1876, to Santa Barbara, Cal., and spent the winter with her sister Abba (Mrs. G. W. Young), since deceased, but returned in the spring to take part in the permanent exhibition at Philadelphia. And the next spring, in April, 1878, she sailed with a party of ladies for a long European tour; going out accredited as the special correspondent of the Daily Traveller of Boston, and landing at Glasgow. She went to Paris for the first six weeks of the exhibition; then through Norway, Sweden and Russia, and back to Paris, for October and November; after which the winter was spent in Rome, and the spring in Egypt and Palestine: a party of four ladies spending holy week in Jerusalem, and twenty days on horse-back to Beirut, then to Constantinople and Rome, reaching Paris early in July, 1879. Writing up Britain and Normandy, and after a tour of England made alone and among the peasantry, she sailed Sept. 13, 1879, for New York.

The late ROYAL SOUTHWICK had entered upon his eighty-second year when "the fatal asterisk of death" was set against his name. He was born at Uxbridge in this state, September 14, 1795, and was a lineal descendant of Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick of Salem, Mass., who were banished from the state by the Puritans, in 1659, for believing in Quakerism; they went to Shelter Island, where they died within three days of each other, in the spring of 1660, from exposure and privation. They were, previous to banishment, fined, whipped and imprisoned for non-attendance at the First Church, of Salem. The inherited faith which sustained the heart of the noble William Penn, and which inspired the verse of Whittier, never lost its hold on Royal Southwick, nor did he ever forget the martyrdom which his ancestors suffered for the love of truth. It was his practice through life to attend the yearly meetings of the Friends or Quakers, at Newport, R. I. His father, brother and sister were all elders of the Society of Friends.

In 1826, he married Direxa Claffin, daughter of Major John Claffin, of Milford, sister of Horace B. and Aaron Claffin, of New York.

In 1829, when the Lowell Manufacturing Company commenced operations here, Mr. Southwick, Alexander Wright, the Wilson brothers, and others, moved to Lowell from Medway, and engaged in the manufacture of carpets. Mr. Southwick took the processes of carding and spinning by contract. He remained in that company's employ till 1844, and his contract proved highly remunerative to him and also to the company.

In 1844, he visited England, and informed himself thoroughly touching the latest improvements in the various processes of the woolen manufacture, that had been introduced there. He then purchased a large interest in the Baldwin Manufacturing Company at North Chelmsford, whose business he conducted with signal success for about ten years; then transferred his interest to the Wilton Manufacturing Company, and successfully conducted the operations of the latter company until near the opening of the Rebellion.

Outside of manufacturing, he engaged extensively in other operations, and was for some years President of the Merchants Bank, succeeding Dr. Pillsbury, and preceding Mr. Hosford in that office.

He remained a citizen of Lowell until 1859, when he removed to Boston, and continued to reside there until his death. During his long abode in Lowell, he was prominent in many public movements, and exerted himself strenuously in behalf of the Whig party, which, in fulfillment of the dying prediction of his illustrious friend, Daniel Webster, now lives "only in history."

While cherishing the friendship of Webster, Mr. Southwick cherished with still greater fondness the friendship of Webster's celebrated Whig rival, Henry Clay. For "Harry of the West" he named his first-born son. To secure the prize of the Presidency for "Harry of the West," he thought no sacrifice of time or money too great. And when, in visiting Lowell, in October, 1833, Mr. Clay took upon his knee, and blessed, and caressed the boy whom his far-off Lowell friend had named for him, the fond father's "cup of happiness" was full. Endeared as Henry Clay was to him, Mr. Southwick felt a natural and just pride, (as a Delegate from Massachusetts to the National Whig Convention of 1840), in voting for the nomination of Mr. Clay. But it was written in the Book of Destiny that Kentucky's greatest son, (loved and honored, as he was, above all others, by millions of Americans), should never enter the Promised Land of Presidential power. Fate, which, with grim irony, is forever laughing at the wisest calculations, and dashing to the ground the fondest hopes of the children of men, passed both Clay and Webster by, and bestowed her laurel crown on William H. Harrison.

In 1844, it seemed that Mr. Clay's hour had come, and the interest felt in his election was as great among the Whigs of Lowell as among those of Ashland. Mr. Southwick was then a member of the State Senate, and seemed likely to become a member of Congress. He exerted himself to the utmost for Mr. Clay. The telegraph not having been introduced, if the mails alone were relied on, the Whigs of Lowell would have to remain during the whole night following the national election in painful doubt whether they had lost or won in the great struggle for power. There was then no Times office where the returns could be learned from New York—the pivotal State—as now. Southwick arranged that instantly upon the arrival at the Albany depot in Boston of the New York train at ten o'clock on the decisive night, a swift horse should receive the returns and bring them, with all speed, to Woburn. At Woburn, his own well-known horse, "Old Royal," stood ready to bring the returns to Lowell. The Democrats also ran a similar "pony express" to the Lowell Advertiser office. "Old Royal" brought the disastrous news of Clay's defeat from Woburn to his master in one hour. The excitement of that night will never be forgotten by those who participated in it, though one and thirty years have rolled by since it subsided into silence and calm. How grimly and wildly the Democrats rejoiced over Mr. Polk's success! How the Whigs mourned—many actually wept—over the final defeat of their idolized Clay! None more than Horace Greeley, who twenty-eight years later, encountered a similar Waterloo. Mr. Southwick could never feel such an interest in any later contest.

Having mentioned his Whigism, it is but fair to state that his courage and independence far outweighed his devotion to party. With his Quakerism he inherited an earnest opposition of human slavery, and a disposition to treat the black man with the same respect which he bestowed on the white. It was largely through his instrumentality that George Thompson, the English anti-slavery agitator, visited Lowell, while a member of Parliament, in 1834, and spoke, and was mobbed in the old City Hall, and he it was who entertained Mr. Thompson and William Lloyd Garrison (who accompanied him) at his house. It required real courage for any Democratic or Whig politician, in those days, to receive such "firebrands" into his house as his guests; but, a few years later, Mr. Southwick indulged his hospitable disposition in a manner more daring still. When Frederick Douglass and Charles Lennox Remond came to Lowell and addressed her people in the same hall in which Mr. Thompson had been mobbed, Mr. Southwick took them to his house in Tyler street, and extended to them the same civilities to which by courtesy they would have been entitled had they not been "guilty of a skin not colored as his own." In spite of the then prevailing prejudice against negroes and abolitionists, Mr. Southwick, perhaps, lost nothing of official position by showing "the courage of his opinions." In 1833, 1839 and 1840 he served as a member of the House of Representatives; in 1841, in the Common Council; in 1844 and 1845, in the State Senate; and for several years he was Chairman of the Whig City Committee. But for many years prior to his sudden death on Sept. 23, 1875, he had wholly withdrawn from any form of public service.

Mr. Southwick leaves three sons, Henry Clay and John Claffin, New York merchants for many years past, the latter of whom appeared as a principal witness for the Rev. Henry Ward Beecher in the famous Tilton case; and Royal, now on his return voyage from Europe. He also leaves two daughters—Mrs. Josephine Mellen Ayer, wife of Dr. James C. Ayer, and Miss Edna B. Southwick. His wife, also, survives him. He was buried at Mount Auburn, the Rev. Dr. DeWitt conducting his funeral services. The attendance of relatives was unusually large, and the casket which contained his remains, beautiful in death as he was in his prime of manhood, seemed buried in a bank of flowers.

Mr. Southwick was a subject of great interest to the phrenologist on account of the magnitude of his brain. The circumference of his head was the same as that of the head of Mr. Webster; and for many years he and Webster wore hats made on the same block. Very few such heads are recorded in human annals. Here and there, in the long procession of the centuries, larger heads may have appeared than history or biographers have taken notice of, just as, according to Sir Thomas Browne, more remarkable persons have been forgotten "than any that stand remembered in the known account of time." A few only, even of those conspicuous enough to attract the attention of the biographer, have had their cranial dimensions transmitted to us. In virtue of his bulk of brain, the late Mr. Southwick deserves to pass into history with Franklin, Webster and James T. Brady, among Americans; Addison, Fox and Sir James Simpson, among Englishmen; Baron Cuvier, Mirabeau and Napoleon the First, among Frenchmen; Dr. Chalmers, among Scotchmen; Pope Leo the Tenth, among Italians; and Haller, Leibnitz and Puffendorf, among Germans.

2238. Martha^s, born July 25, 1840, died Jan. 25, 1841.

LUCRETIA SOUTHWICK, when about twelve years of age, and a short time previous to the battle of Plattsburgh, when the British were seizing men, teams, and provisions, in Mooers, and its vicinity, her father being warned of the danger of remaining at his house, he with his sons drove the cattle into the depths of a forest, fitted up booths, and stored hay, grain, and other valuables, coming home nights to look after the house and procure cooked food; Lucretia was left in charge of the house, her mother being on a visit to her old home in Connecticut, and her older sister being also absent. The expected British soon arrived, who ransacked the house and catechised her, wishing to know about her father and brothers, she managed to evade their questions and to excite their surprise by her smart answers. They at length took their departure, and in leaving the house helped themselves to some plums, and while doing so remarked to her that they were going down to take Plattsburgh, she replied that they probably would have to take large quantities of plum sauce in doing so. They were somewhat profuse in their profane replies, and on reaching Plattsburgh they could not capture it, and found it was easier to steal plums than to capture Plattsburgh.

WARHAM SOUTHWICK had an eventful life, which would be very interesting to relate had we all the particulars, as it is we can only give sketches.

After living many years at Kinderhook, Ill., where he was a farmer and stock raiser, he moved to Rossville, Iowa, and then to Pleasant Valley (same state), where he carried on trade with the Indians in the most friendly and prosperous manner.

An incident is related of his wife putting a dishpan full of Mexican dollars into the stove oven to secure it from the pilfering Indians, as she was going out for a little while. The next morning she forgot to remove it until the fire had been built some time; though not injured they were very hot.

After trading in this way a few years, or until 1854, they, in company with many others, emigrated by the Freemont overland route to California, taking with them a large stock of cattle, and a large body guard, mounted and sufficiently armed for protection. They were well furnished with emigrant wagons, and everything necessary for the journey. His wife has been heard to say it was one of the most enjoyable she ever undertook.*

* Her father with his wife and sons had undertaken the same journey the year before, and when near Utah, were attacked by the so-called Indians, the father killed and the cattle taken from them. The family remained at Utah, and putting the affair into a lawyer's hands, he recovered satisfaction for the property.

Warham's death seemed almost a tragedy. He was returning from a political meeting in California, and with him were riding two men of opposing politics. (Warham inherited the plain outspoken characteristic of the Southwicks.) They were noticed to be warmly engaged in discussing their favorite topics. The termination of it was, he was found lying beside the road in an unconscious state, his head badly bruised, while his team had run away. He lived two days apparently unconscious, except at intervals. During one of these, not being able to speak, he made signs that he had been unfairly treated.* His widow, one son and two daughters, still live in Soquel, California.

In these years I had a varied life; I travelled in New Jersey, Pennsylvania, Virginia, Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana and Michigan. When I was 20, I commenced teaching school; at 21, I cast my first vote for Harrison and took quite an interest in politics for a while. I then began to think of a profession, and turned my attention to medicine. I studied and attended college at Cincinnati, Ohio; graduated in 1846 and came to Centerville, St. Joseph Co., Mich., and commenced practicing. In 1848, married. In 1849, I moved to Mendon, same county. In 1852, I crossed the plains to California, and in 1854 returned home, via Isthmus and New York. (I still reside in Mendon, (1880), and my children with me). Since that time I have been engaged principally in farming. I abandoned the practice of medicine outside of my own family, when I returned from California.

The first year after his marriage he bought a farm of 100 acres in Venango Co., Pa., on Oil Creek, and was engaged part of the time in gathering oil (what is now called Petroleum), by spreading flannel cloths over the water where the oil was seen on the surface and wringing them out. He was the first one to take it down the river to Pittsburgh, but found it very slow of sale as the people knew little of what uses it could be put to, it then being used only as a medicine. He sold out his farm on Oil Creek and bought 440 acres on the Alleghany River, near what is now called Oil City, built a hotel and carried on quite an extensive business for several years; sold out and returned to Crawford Co., and in Oct., 1871, removed to Buffalo, Dallas Co., Mo., his present residence.

and in a very short space of time acquired sufficient knowledge and experience to manage, in the absence of his employer, the business of one of the two principal drug establishments in the city. In a very short time he became proprietor of the establishment; and by investigating and experimenting he produced several medicines which had a great sale and brought him great wealth. His laboratory for compounding medicines gave employment to about three hundred persons. As his wealth increased, he gave attention to manufacturing industries. He also became a large real estate owner in New York, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia and many other cities of the Union. He was a man of remarkable energies, and his too close application to business was undoubtedly the cause of his mental faculties becoming overthrown. He died July 3, 1878, leaving an estate valued at several millions.

HENRY C. SOUTHWICK, for many years of the boot and shoe firm of Benedict, Hall & Co., New York, died in Cincinnati, Ohio, aged 49 years. The deceased came to New York when he was sixteen years old, and when he attained his majority, was made a member of the above firm. Shortly before the war his health failed and he made a trip to Europe, from which he returned greatly improved, and at once assumed a leading position in carrying on the large transactions of the firm of which he was a member, and which, during the war, assumed extraordinary proportions. He enjoyed a high degree of popularity and his large operations, embracing the filling of many heavy government contracts, were always marked by that quickness of perception and promptness in deciding, which are such essential qualities of a successful merchant. He retired from the shoe business about eight years ago, but has been since that time, connected with Horace B. Claflin & Co., in the dry goods trade. He is a nephew of Mr. Claflin, and a brother of John C. Southwick, of the New York Swamp, the centre of the hide and leather business of New York city.

JOHN C. SOUTHWICK.

- 3186. Clifford⁹, born June 16, 1875.

JOHN CLAFLIN SOUTHWICK, son of Royal and Direxa (Clafin) Southwick, was born in Lowell, Mass., Dec. 2, 1835. Having finished his education he went as clerk with Messrs. Young & Schultz, hide and leather dealers, corner of Ferry and Cliff streets, New York city, Feb. 23, 1856. He was a clerk with them for four years, and by his close application to their business and learning to be a salesman, was admitted a partner with the said firm in 1860. Their business soon becoming too large for the store they then occupied, Messrs. Young & Schultz built a very large store on Cliff street, running through to Franklin Square. Owing to the death of the senior partner, Edmund M. Young, Esq., who died Oct. 8, 1864, the firm then became Schultz, Southwick & Co.; they soon after moved their business to No. 65 Cliff street, and in 1879, their business having grown very large, Jackson S. Shultz, Esq., the senior partner, built a very capacious store at the north end of Cliff street, which connected with their hide house, where they moved in the fall of 1879, being Nos. 109, 111 and 113 Cliff street. The firm have always maintained a just reputation for a high order of business integrity, and with a large capital have an unlimited credit in merchandise or money.

John C. Southwick by his active mind and careful scrutiny in buying and selling, and by his close attention to the business has relieved Mr. Schultz from the care of business, by which he has been able to give much time to many things outside of his business. In 1873 Mr. Schultz went to Vienna as commissioner to the World's Fair, leaving their very large business of buying and selling and all their heavy financial business with said Southwick to attend to, he then being only in his thirty-eighth year, which he very successfully managed, to the great satisfaction of his partner Mr. Schultz.

She is assistant compiler of the records of the descendants of Lawrence and Cassandra Southwick. Maria's mother's father, Asahel Smith, was an engineer and surveyor and a brother of judge Chauncy Smith, of Benson, Vt. She was sister of the late Rev. Henry H. Smith of the Methodist Episcopal Conference.

Her father Hosea, and mother, Maria D., moved in the spring of 1819 on a new farm, with only a log house and barn, in the midst of a forest; but the land was soon cleared and the wood reduced to potash, one of the staple products of the country at that time, and teamed with oxen to Montreal to market. Although deprived of many pleasing associations, they were able to have all the necessities of life. It was no uncommon thing to hear the howling of wolves at night, which would be kept at bay by throwing firebrands at them. The making of maple sugar was an important industry in the spring, when the maple sap would run. After eight years of pioneer life they purchased and moved on another farm which was nearer church but not so near school, where they stayed two years, and in the spring of 1829 they moved to Champlain, P. O. address, Perrys Mills, being a pleasant change to village life. In 1832 her father died from cholera, which was very rapidly fatal; he had intervals of consciousness and was resigned to depart this life. Twenty-five years after, her mother died from a cancer or perhaps poison, which was used outwardly, being absorbed by the blood; she died at Mooers, at the house of her youngest daughter, Mrs. Almira H. Angell, May 16, 1857.

KEZIA SOUTHWICK, daughter of Benjamin and Agnes (Smith), was born in Blackstone, Mass., (then Mendon), Feb. 13, 1803, and married Ira Wallace, of Dalton, N. H., Oct. 27, 1825. She was a very energetic, persevering, fine looking woman, and it was her fortune to meet more of the hardships and trials of life than usually falls to the lot of woman.

In November, after she was married, she went with her husband, taking their goods with them, and leaving all her friends, to his home in Dalton, N.H.; then scarcely anything but a wilderness. They were eight days on the road, as they travelled by carriage, there being no better mode of conveyance at that time; now it takes nine hours to go the same distance. It was very cold, through a lonely country, and many times she had to walk to keep warm; so that with all her resolution, she became very homesick, and as they passed through Franconia Notch, they stopped at the basin, to see the wonders of nature; it looked so quiet and restful, that she was tempted to jump in and end all her fatigue, but she was spared by the hand of the Lord, to be a strong help to her husband and children. When they arrived at Dalton, their house was not finished; just one acre of land cleared, where the house stood, the rest all woods, so they had to begin life in earnest. She did all her own work; made all their own cloth; carding, spinning, and weaving both wool and flax for the family; braiding straw, both coarse and fine; making both hats and bonnets for ladies and gentlemen, besides lending a hand at work on the farm when it seemed necessary.

She had eight children, Mary, George, Oscar, Susan, Ira, Amelia and a pair of twins, which died young. Her husband died Feb. 27, 1844, of erysipelas, being sick only two days, leaving her with several small children to care for, which she did well. Two of them were taken so sick the day her husband died, with erysipelas, that their lives were despaired of, but they were spared, with all the others, to be a comfort and help to her in her years of helplessness. In May, 1845, she was thrown from her carriage and broke her right arm, at the wrist, so that the bone protruded through the flesh. She had to wear splints on it for seventeen weeks. In the year 1847 she was attacked with rheumatism, which never left her. Most of the time she was a great sufferer, many of her joints grew out of joint, and bone formed in their sockets, so that for several years she was very helpless, but she bore her sufferings with great patience, doing light work to pass the time away, when it seemed impossible for her to do anything.

Sept. 3, 1849, she was again thrown from a carriage, at nearly the same place as before, and so much injured that she was taken up for dead, her head striking on a rock. She lay unconscious for several days, and when she came to herself her eyes were crossed and never turned back again. She used to say in telling of it in after years, that her head split the rock.

The 14th of April, 1857, at midnight, a cold rainy night, they discovered their house on fire, and so badly burned, that the family had barely time to escape in their night-clothes, which was all they saved from the house; Mrs. Wallace being at that time so lame that she could not get off the bed alone, her son Ira had just time to carry her out. It rained at the time and the snow and slosh was ankle deep. They were obliged to remain out in it for several hours, as all their buildings were burned, and neighbors quite a distance off. With the kind assistance of neighbors they soon had another house erected on the same spot, living in it as soon as it was boarded up, and finishing it as they could, but she did not complain. She died Jan. 9, 1877, nearly 74 years old, glad to be free from the sufferings and trials of this life, and rejoicing in the blessed hope of immortality beyond the grave.

Her son Ira M. Wallace, was a soldier in the late rebellion. He enlisted April 22, 1861, for three months, and reenlisted June 1, 1861, in the 2d N. H. Vol., Col. Maston, Co. F., Capt. Snow, for three years. He was in the first battle of Bull Run, fought July 21, 1861, the battle of Williamsburg; seige of Yorktown; battle of Fair Oaks ; Seven Pines ; Balls Church ; both battles of Melvin Hills ; and lost his right arm, Aug. 29, 1862, at the second battle of Bull Run. His arm was a great loss to him, and he says "I feel my loss very much, and often, but never regretted that I enlisted." He now lives in Kansas, where I think he took up a soldiers claim.

ORIN FREDERICK SOUTHWICK⁸, (Orin⁷, David⁶, Samuel⁵, Daniel⁴, Samuel³, John², Lawrence¹), son of Orin and Hannah (Stone), born Oct. 31, 1831, in Mooers, Clinton Co., N.Y.; married, Aug. 20, 1867, in Freeborn, by her father, Rev. John Benson, Mary

E. Benson, of Minnesota, born March 5, 1845, in Corina, Me. Children, all born in Wells, Minn.:

ORIN FREDERICK SOUTHWICK, second son of Orin and Hannah (Stone), was born in Mooers, Clinton Co., N. Y., Oct. 31, 1831. He remained with his parents till he was twenty-one, helping to clear up and develop the Southwick homestead. His education was obtained in the common school, Champlain Academy, and Fort Edward Collegiate Institute. He taught several terms of school in Mooers and Champlain, and was a very successful teacher. He was a member of the first Teacher's Institute held in Clinton Co., and assisted in organizing the first Teacher's Association of Clinton Co., being one of the committee on organization.

His first speculation on an extensive scale was in the purchase of corn in Ogdensburgh, in car-load lots, shipped to Centerville, then with teams to the old grist mill of A. J. C. Blackman, where it was ground and sold.

On Monday, May 9, 1859, he left Mooers, home and friends, and went West, spending a few weeks with Milton Southwick and family in Wisconsin, and here received his first introduction to western customs and western life. Continuing his journey west, he crossed the Mississippi for the first time at Prairie Duchine, thence by stage into Iowa, remaining a few weeks at Burr Oak, a pleasant village in the southern part of the state, where he met with several families formerly from Mooers and Champlain. While here he engaged to teach the Burr Oak Institute, commencing in September. After spending nearly two weeks at this place, he loaded a team with flour, meal and smoked hams, and started across a new country to Freeborn, Minn., this being his first introduction to pioneer life. As the settlements were far between, he had to camp out nights, either sleeping on the ground or on his load; as there were no bridges, he had to ford streams and sloughs, often having to unload and carry his load over on his back, with the help of the teamster. After a tiresome journey with an ox team through a new country, quite early in the morning of June 8th he arrived at Freeborn, where he received a joyful reception from his brother David and cousins Joel and May Southwick, who were keeping house. Here he sold his flour for $6.00 a hundred pounds, and meal for $4.00. Remaining here during the summer, he preempted 160 acres of land, going to the U. S. land office at Chatfield, 85 miles, for that purpose, but went with two ox teams and two wagons, taking Joel Southwick with him, and loading back with corn meal; he thus continued his trade in provisions, which paying a liberal profit, was also entered into by his brother David Southwick, which might be called the commencement of the extensive mercantile firm of Southwick Brothers.

On the 4th of July, 1859, he delivered the Fourth of July oration in Freeborn, which was listened to by a large gathering of pioneers. About the last of August he left Freeborn and journeyed to Burr Oak, Iowa, to fulfil his engagement to teach the Burr Oak Institute. His stay in the west had already brought upon him the great western malady, the fever and ague, which continued for several months at times; but disregarding the chills and shakes, on the 19th day of September he commenced his first term of school in Burr Oak, and remained here till the spring of 1861, having taught five terms of school with good success. During vacation, in the autumn of 1860, he was employed by the State Superintendent to conduct and teach the first Teacher's Institute in Winnesheik County, held at Decorah, for which he received at the rate of $78 per month. In the spring of 1861 the mercantile business established two years before at Freeborn, which had been under the management of David Southwick, had so increased that it needed both of these brothers, hence Frederick resigned his position as principal of the Burr Oak Institute, contrary to the wishes of the trustees and the school, and returned to Freeborn, Minnesota, by an indirect line of stages, reaching Freeborn May 3.

The war had commenced, and the financial crisis was upon the country. The Banks of Illinois and Wisconsin had many of them failed and the notes of others were at a great discount, so much that out of about $700 in bank bills the firm of Southwick Brothers could raise but about $400 to purchase a spring stock of goods; but having already established a credit, they were able to buy all the goods needed for their trade. Trade continued to increase, and immigration continued to flow into the country. No railroads being yet built in the state of Minnesota, all goods had to be hauled from the Mississippi River: the nearest point being Hastings, 90 miles from Freeborn. Southwick Brothers employed several teams to draw wheat, hides, etc., to Hastings and load back with goods; paying 25 cents per bushel for drawing wheat, and 50 cents per 100 pounds for drawing goods back. It took horse teams five to six days to make the trip, and ox teams seven to eight. Business continued, trade increased and money accumulated.

Orin Southwick having a knowledge of surveying, spent part of his time surveying and plotting roads, and surveying and subdividing timber lots. He served one term as superintendent of schools of Freeborn Co., which occupied part of his time, the rest was spent in the store, either behind the counter or upon his books in the office, except such time as he was in the market purchasing goods. He made several visits to his native home. The Winnebago Indians' reservation being near Freeborn, Southwick Brothers received a share of their patronage, exchanging goods with them for furs, feathers, etc., and by fair dealing gained their confidence, friendship and trade; but after the Sioux outbreak of 1862 the Winnebago Indians were removed west, and thus ended this branch of trade.

In 1867 Orin Southwick was married, and with his wife made a tour through the western, middle and eastern states, visiting O. C. Merrill and family in Michigan City, Ind., and Erastus and David South-wick and families in Ohio, besides spending a few weeks at his father's, in Mooers, and visiting with friends in Mooers, Champlain, Chazy, Beekmantown and Schuyler's Falls, also visiting with friends in Massachusetts and New York city.

The Southern Minnesota Railroad passed about seven miles south of Freeborn, building up the towns of Alden and Wells, thus Freeborn being left away from the railroad it became a dull town, and to-day Freeborn is a village of the past, though once a beautiful thriving business town resting on the north bank of the beautiful inland lake of Freeborn, a spot yet destined in the future to be the resort of lovers of beautiful scenery and delightful lake breezes.

Freeborn being left off the railroad line, Southwick Brothers built a large store at Wells, and took in with them two young men, Huntley and Terhune, and opened their extensive store at Wells, June 6, 1870. The future seemed bright, and business promised good; but David Southwick, after a brief illness of eleven days, died in September of the same year and left the business of Wells and Freeborn in the hands of O. F. Southwick, who shortly after sold the stock of goods at Freeborn to his younger brothers, Titus and Pliny. In the spring of 1871 he bought out Terhune's interest in the Wells store, and the next spring, 1872, bought out Huntley's interest and has since owned and run the business alone, and is now doing an extensive mercantile business; besides farming on an extensive scale, owning 1440 acres of rich prairie land.

O. F. Southwick is a large robust man, now weighing 262 pounds, and enjoying life. He is a radical temperance man, having served two terms as mayor of the city of Wells, elected by the temperance party. He is connected with the M. E. Church of Wells and is superintendent of the Sunday School.

MR. DAVID SOUTHWICK died at Wells, Minn., Thursday, Sept. 8, 1870, at one A. M., of bilious fever, aged thirty-three years. He was one of our oldest and best citizens. Coming to this section of the State at twenty years of age, thirteen years ago, he settled at Freeborn, in Freeborn County, where he engaged in trade. Two years later, his brother, Frederick, came west and connected himself with him. They remained at Freeborn, building up a handsome village as well as an extensive business until this spring, when David connected with him two young men from the East, Messrs. Huntley and Terhune, and put in a large retail establishment at Wells.

Two weeks ago Mr. Southwick was in the best of health and exuberant spirits. To-day he is lifeless, his wife mourns the loss of a husband, his child a father, and the community in which he lived, one of its best citizens. The bereaved family have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community. About two years since, we announced his marriage in The Stand- ard, and his union, we believe, proved a very happy one. It seems therefore, a hard decree of fate that his young wife and child should be called, thus early, to mourn his loss.—The Standard, Wells, Minn.

Lines addressed to Mrs. Fanny Southwick on the death of her husband, Mr. David Southwick, who died Sept. 8, 1870, aged thirty-three years :

Did I dream as I counted my jewels o'er
That my lintel was marked like a Jewish door?
That my ear was sealed to the midnight cry
As the angel of Death was passing by?—
A guest unbidden, he stood at my side,
And the lov'd of my household drooped and died.
That dear lov'd one in his morning dew,
His skeleton fingers chilled him through;
Like a snow drift he lay so passing fair,
I had worshipped my idol even there,
And rashly queried the Giver— why
He willed that my cherished gift should die!
No upward glance in the deepening gloom
For my heart went down to the dreary tomb,
They spoke of my lov'd in a happier sphere,
But their solace fell on a listless ear—
For I knew full well in my utter woe
I had held the fluttering wing below;
And I wildly mourned as the seraph band
Were bearing him on to the Glory land.
Oh, tempted and tried!—yet recreant still,
For I bow'd me not to Thy Sovereign will,
And “by many stripes must my healing be”
Ere a chastened heart I can bring to Thee.
The chalice of bitterness drank— Oh, God!
With a broken spirit I kiss the rod;
For I think of the jewel yet in store
And of Justice stern, that may ask for more.

Then I bow'd my spirit and felt how vain,
 My tears could not call him to life again :
 Like David of old — I will cheer me now,
 I will throw the sackcloth off my brow,
 For faith springs up and a hope is given
 The loved and lost will be met in heaven,
 Where I soon may rest from my will and care,
 When my Heavenly Father calls me there.
 "As it seemeth good to the Holy One
 Be it life or death, may His will be done."

KATE J. PENN.

Some weeks ago we noticed the death of David Southwick, one of our most esteemed citizens. A copy of our paper strayed way down to Virginia, where the War King made such sad desolation during the war. Our remarks met the eye of Mrs. Penn, a lady who in that dark time, though ill-treated, robbed of home, property and friends, and wrecked in health, dared to remain, hoped on, looking ever to Him above for comfort. She at once addressed to Mrs. Southwick the above lines, which are regarded by her friends as singularly apt as well as stored with beautiful thought. — The Standard, Wells, Minn.

In May, 1857, David H. Southwick, with a small capital, started for the west, made his way to Chicago and then to Illinois and Wisconsin, from thence he started for Minnesota, arriving at Prairie Duchene on the Mississippi, he took passage on a steamer and went up the river nearly 200 miles to Redwing where he disembarked, and alone with his traveling sack he walked over an unsettled prairie, about 100 miles, to

MRS. P. F. SOUTHWICK.

PLINY FITCH SOUTHWICK.

Freeborn, a small settlement on the north shore of the beautiful lake bearing the same name. Here he made his home and soon engaged in trade with the Indians, buying and selling furs, blankets, etc. Two years later he was joined by his brother Orin F. They united interests and enlarged the business and were known by the name of Southwick Brothers, and thus continued until his death. The brothers built up an extensive trade and accumulated money, each working for the interest of the firm without any division of property or any individual account. David filled many places of trust, had a large circle of friends and was blessed with superior traits of character. Being a great reader his mind was richly stored with historical anecdotes, he was well versed in history, and especially in the general and current news of the day. He died Sept. 8, 1870, leaving an untarnished name.

PLINY FITCH SOUTHWICK⁸, (Orin⁷, Daniel⁶, Samuel⁵, David⁴, Samuel³, John², Lawrence¹), son of Orin and Hannah (Stone), born Sept. 7, 1850, in Mooers; married, Sept. 11, 1878, in Harrisonburg, Va., Cornelia Wilson Tabb, daughter of George Washington and Mary Creighton (Wilson) Tabb, of Virginia, Jefferson Co., born March 13, 1850, in Berkley Co., Virginia, died April 13, 1880, of peritonitis. George Washington Tabb was one of the jurymen who signed the death warrant of John Brown. One child:

3620. Cassandra Tabb⁹, born April 2, 1880, died when 4 days old.

PLINY FITCH SOUTHWICK went to Northampton in 1866, at the age of 16, and learned the dry goods business, remained there till 1870, then went into business in Freeborn, Minn., with T. A. Southwick; spent two months on the frontier, and then returned to Northampton, Mass., where he became a partner in the store where he learned his business. He afterwards sold his interest and became a commercial traveller for a New York importing house. Was in the dry goods business (1880) in Harrisonburg, Va.

MRS. CORNELIA WILSON (TABB) SOUTHWICK was born in Berkley Co., W. Va., near Martinsburg, March 13, 1850. She purchased another home at Fair View, Jefferson Co., on the Opeaquon Creek, near Charlestown, where her family moved a year later, the place rendered historical by John Brown's trial, and where her father, George Washington Tabb, served in this trial and wrote his verdict; also a noted place of numerous conflicts during our late civil war. She was educated by private teachers until during the war, when she completed her education at Ann Smith Academy at Lexington, Va. Remaining at home until her family moved to Harrisonburg, where she had numerous opportunities of travel and gratifying her taste for literature, she married Pliny F. Southwick Sept. 11, 1878, but died April 13, 1880, having attained the type of a true and lovely woman at an early age.

The following graphic account, from the Lynchburg Virginian, of the marriage in this place of Mr. Pliny F. Southwick and Miss Cornelia W. Tabb, youngest daughter of our worthy townsman, G. W. Tabb, Esq., will be read with much interest by the many friends of both parties in Harrisonburg:

HARRISONBURG, Va., Sept. 15, 1878.

Dear Virginian:

DEAR C.—When I arrived in Harrisonburg two months ago “a stranger in a strange land,” I little imagined the charming affaire de cocur whose progress I was to watch, until it terminated in an Old Virginia marriage.

I apply this epithet to the offering so recently made to Hymen, because all connected with it was so utterly different from the present marriage a la mode; and because its quiet, refined modesty reminded me of the days when the marriage rite was regarded as the public seal to a compact, considered solemn and binding from the first moment of its formation—not merely an occasion of gorgeous display, much gossip and sometimes, even scandal.

Yet this quiet, little marriage was attended by such romantic circumstances, that you must let me repeat them to you:

The bride, Miss. C. T., was the youngest daughter of Mr. G. W. T., formerly of Jefferson county, and whose family are too well known throughout Virginia, to require further comment, except that he had been a prominent jurymen at the John Brown trial.

During the late war, this fact appeared to increase the animosity extended to him and his family, by the Federal soldiers—indeed, so great were the hardships endured by this family, that it was quite natural their recollections of “the Yankees” should not be the most agreeable imaginable. But they had promised to become loyal subjects to the United States Government, and they would certainly be true to their word; so last winter, when Mrs. T. found it necessary to receive boarders into her family, she accepted the application of a gentleman, actually born in New York, and partly bred in New England. His very complexion, fair and ruddy, proved him a true son of the North: perhaps, like many other Americans, he is descended from those old Northmen, the Danes, who so frequently disturbed the peace of the ancient Britons. At all events, he was now about to imitate the example of the Danes by invading this happy home.

Personally there was no objection to this gentleman, still Mrs. T.'s children could not give him a very cordial welcome, and Miss C. (whose warm Southern heart caused her to feel particularly belligerent towards him) privately resolved to treat him with the coldest civility, holding only such intercourse with him as was required by common courtesy. Little did Miss C. imagine that, through her instrumentality, he was to become what Susan Nipper would term “a permanency,” and not “a temporary.” However, by the time Spring had arrived, it was discovered that not only had this “young man’s fancies,” but also those of this patriotic young maiden, had very seriously turned to "thoughts of love."

Of course everybody now knows the sequel, but during that wonderful period of "engagement," everything was kept delightfully quiet. Even the neighbors had to forego the pleasure of discussing the bride's trousseau, every article of which was nevertheless, thoroughly comme il faut.

The usual white veil and orange blossoms were replaced by a stylish traveling costume, more appropriate for seven o'clock in the morning, at which hour Miss L. entered the parlor on Mr. S.'s arm, looking as if only a true Northerner could make her happy, so entirely does love triumph over even our national prejudices. But, one word about the parlor. It was literally a mass of lovely flowers, and from the centre depended the grand marriage bell, formed of white flowers and geranium leaves; that wonderful bell, which would, so soon,

"Ring out a slowly dying cause,
And ancient forms of party strife,
Ring in the noble modes of life,
With sweeter manners, purer laws."

And in contrast to the white flowers, there might be seen in the distance a background of dusky faces and woolly heads, belonging to those dear old "aunts" and "uncles," who are often the most truly loved relatives of a Southern child.

Then followed the parental blessing, the friendly congratulations, the hurried farewell, and the next moment two happy souls were whirling up the Shenandoah Valley. I imagine they were rather oblivious to its beautiful scenery, as on such occasions, each soul is supposed to be absorbed with gratitude at having found its "better half." Hoping you may enjoy the report of this little marriage occasion as much as I did the reality, and with many thanks for the patience extended to this long letter, I am yours sincerely,

L. W. W.

Eighteen months after the above we have the following from Mr. Pliny F. Southwick's own pen:

April 23, 1880.

My Dear Mother and Friends at home:

I have been trying to gather fortitude to write you again.

Last week I wrote you of the death of our little one only four days old. But now I must tell you that Cornelia too is dead.

They lie side by side in the cold and silent grave * * * She exhorted friends to meet her in heaven, then bade us a triumphant adieu, saying, "The angel troop are waiting."

He engaged largely in tanning sole leather and became largely engaged in the manufacture of boots and shoes. His business being very extended, the great depreciation in merchandise caused him to lose all the capital which his father left him, which was very large for those days. He afterwards became a broker in hides and tanning material in Boston, and did a large business and was quite successful in it, but lost heavily by the great fire in Boston in 1872. His life was a very chequered one, and he died shortly after the great fire. He was a man of great energy and genial disposition.
